U.S. Spending Is Defended By Roosevelt In Arid Area

Assails New Deal Critics of Planned Economy in Train Talks.

Holds Co-operation Is Drought Remedy

Asserts All Government Branches Must Aid in Program.

By Franklyn Waltman.
By a Staff Correspondent.

En Route With President Roosevelt Through South Dakota, Aug. 28.—President Roosevelt today penetrated deeper into the great plains drought area of the Northwest, examining the havoc wrought by heat and lack of rain and surveying what Federal agencies are doing to assist this afflicted section.

Some aboard the Roosevelt train tonight believed that the President dropped his pretense of making a nonpolitical trip when he spoke to a crowd of at least 10,000 persons grouped around the rear platform of his train. His remarks were interpreted as a blow at critics of his spending and planned economy policies. Asserting that he was thinking not alone about the problem of relieving distress in this area but about the future because he wanted to see South Dakota prosper, the President sarcastically said: "I understand there are some people not in favor of planning ahead."

"I believe," he added, as the crowd laughed, "that there are some people who say it is not worth spending money to save money. Somebody said yesterday, up in North Dakota, that they believed if you could save $10,000,000 by spending $1,000,000 it was worthwhile."

Mr. Roosevelt's remarks were taken as a defense both of his spending and planned economy policies and as a brief reply to those who have been criticizing them.

Happy Over Rain.

The remainder of his remarks at Aberdeen, loudly applauded by South Dakotans, happy over a drenching rain last night and this morning as well as over the President's presence, dealt with the drought situation.

He applauded the courage which the people were showing in grappling with the drought problem and lauded the co-operation shown by Federal, State and local authorities.

He said "things were beginning to click pretty well and we believe we can win out in this fight."

"In one way," he added, "I don't like to call it a fight because one of our troubles in the past has been that we have been fighting nature. It is time for us now to co-operate with nature."

It was Mr. Roosevelt's second speech of the day. Addressing a crowd of approximately 4,000 at Bismarck, N. Dak., he declared that the solution of the drought problem was "better land use." This has been the keynote of most of his talks out here—that and an emphasis on Federal, State and local governmental co-operation.

The President, aside from these two talks, spent the day traveling through the drought area, wearing a slicker as protection against rain for several hours. His itinerary, made both by train and automobile,

Threats of Shooting President Jail Man

Aberdeen, S. Dak., Aug. 28 (AP).—The Morning American tonight said a 70-year-old man, former insane asylum inmate, had been taken into custody after heard to murmur, "I'm leaving for Pierre to shoot the President."

The man was in the Brown County Jail tonight, the Morning American said. A resident of Hecla, near here, he had been sought about 48 hours, and was traced to Pierre, where the President will be tomorrow, the newspaper said.

One Killed as Gale Hits Terre Haute

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 28 (AP).—A 50-mile-an-hour wind storm struck this city and nearby territory late today, killing at least one person and injuring an undetermined number of residents. Damage was estimated at between $500,000 and $700,000.

The gale, accompanied by a severe electrical display, cut a wide swath through most of the city, blowing down trees and utility poles and damaging homes and automobiles.

Heavy Rainfall Aids Prospects In Wide Area

Drought Declared Ended in Wisconsin; Many States Get Showers.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—Heavy rain in the Western farm belt washed out more drought scars today and enhanced fall prospects in wide areas.

The long stay of intense heat was broken by clouds and showers in the parched Southwest also.

In Wisconsin, the drought was described by Walter Ebling, head of the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service, as definitely ended. Fall pastures promised to be good.

Minnesota authorities said falls of as much as 2.29 inches at Grand Meadows had benefited pastures and would help winter wheat.

Considerable damage from wind and hail was counted in South Dakota after rains which included precipitation of 3.6 inches at Madison and extended throughout the eastern third of the State. The rainfall assured sufficient feed for foundation herds through the winter.

The Madison rain was a virtual cloudburst and sent a creek running through town out of its banks. Violent winds destroyed several barns and other farm buildings in a half-mile belt northwest of Beresford, where 3.17 inches fell in the last 24 hours.

In some Minnesota areas, wind accompanied the almost general rains. At Albert Lea last night two persons were injured and some 4,000 thrown into a panic when a section of the fair grounds grandstand was wrecked by the blow.

Many falls of more than an inch were reported in Iowa, several in Illinois, with the Rockford vicinity getting 2.3 inches. There were substantial showers in parts of Michigan and Oklahoma, light falls in Kansas and more rain was forecast generally for the entire North central area.

Beer-Hound Poodle Turns Traffic Cop After Saloon Tour

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—Knowing her French poodle is a hound for beer, Miss Florence MacFeeley asked police to search Yorkville saloons today when he failed to stagger home at the usual hour.

The dog-loving lieutenant at the East Sixty-first street station nodded understandingly and broadcast an alarm for the errant poodle.

When the police made a tour of the Yorkville bierstuben they found the bartenders all knew the dog well, but he had left "just a little while ago."

"When he gets too much beer," said Miss MacFeeley, a trained nurse, "he gets very frisky and runs around. Then he gets very sleepy, falls over on his back and goes to sleep. When he wakes up he wants black coffee."

Well, they finally found him over on Park avenue, trying to direct traffic. He had a sort of hang-dog expression when they took him home. He wagged his tail and tried to sit up, but it was no go. He fell over on his back and went to sleep.

Bar Orders Study of Sea Laws After Woman's Fervent Appeal

Recommendations on Legislation for Promotion of Safety Asked of Committee After N. Y. Portia, Once Barred From Floor, Cites Morro Castle.

By the United Press.

Boston, Aug. 28.—Stirred by the impassioned plea of a woman attorney who twice previously had been denied the floor, the American Bar Association—acknowledged voice of legal America—moved today toward specific demands for more stringent laws to govern safety at sea.

The House of Delegates at the closing session of the fifty-ninth annual meeting referred both minority and majority reports back to the standing committee on admiralty and maritime law and ordered a thorough study made, with recommendations to be presented at the House mid-winter meeting. An appropriation will be provided.

After listening to Miss Adele Springer, of New York, condemn their report as "unworthy of the American Bar Association," Thomas M. Shackleford, jr., of the majority committee, asked that the matter be resubmitted for further study as the members received the report of the minority member too late.

The report signed by Shackleford, Chairman George H. Terriberry, Carl V. Essery and Stuart S. Janney, made no recommendations "in view of the fact it is a highly technical and scientific subject and one for Congress to deal with."

The minority report by James W. Ryan observed "none of these reasons seems sufficient to justify postponing for one year recommendations which are so urgently required to protect human life."

Ryan's report asked recommendation of a Congressional bill providing:

1. That all shipowners make their vessels reasonably safe or seaworthy at the time for sailing from any port.
2. That all shipowners shall be responsible for careless operation of their vessels and for other

2 Added Trips By Gov. Landon Mapped by Aids

Nominee 'Highly Gratified' With Eastern Swing; Sees State Officers.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 28.—Gov. Alf M. Landon plunged into an accumulation of State business today as Republican Party chieftains mapped plans for the Kansan to make at least two more Presidential campaign tours. He returned early today from his first campaign swing through the East.

Arriving at his office at 10:30 a. m., after a later sleep than usual, the Republican nominee immediately began a series of conferences with Kansas officials. He discussed the drought situation, lunched comparatively unnoticed by fellow Topekans in a downtown cafe, and then met with the State parole board.

To reporters Landon said he had no comment on campaign plans announced by John Hamilton, national chairman, or upon the two-day delay in the Des Moines, Iowa, drought conference President Roosevelt originally called for September 1. Aids said detailed plans for the candidate's trip to Des Moines had not yet been formulated.

As for the 2,889-mile swing eastward through eight States which he completed early this morning, Landon told reporters he was "deeply gratified" with his first 1936 political drive and "appreciated the friendly welcome of those whom I have had the opportunity of meeting."

Robinson Calls Landon Speech 'Scare' Attempt

Republicans Stake Last Hope on Consumers' Fright, He Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 28.—Senator Joe T. Robinson, Democratic majority leader, charged tonight Republicans are "staking their last hope on their ability to frighten the consumer."

Lashing back at Gov. Alf M. Landon's attack upon Administration tax policies, Robinson asserted President Roosevelt "is handling the fiscal policies of the Government with concern for the needs of humanity and with approved regard for the Federal credit."

He accused Landon of seeking "to alarm the man of moderate means by hinting the country is overburdened by a huge public debt that must be paid by those of moderate means."

Robinson said in his radio speech the Governor's only definite and concrete pronouncement as to policies he intends to pursue if elected was a pledge "to slash the taxes on large corporations."

Calls Landon Confused.

"Gov. Landon," continued the Senator, "in the Buffalo address jumbled together local, State and Federal levies without distinction and without even a trivial suggestion as to what shall be done to correct the abuses of which he complains.

"The record shows that he contradicted himself on many points. He decried what he was pleased to call the growing danger of 'hidden' taxes, but the only tax he proposed to repeal is the tax on corporation profits which is a direct tax imposed during the present year.

Cites "Cushion" Clause.

"If he would read the bill itself, Gov. Landon would discover that it provides a cushion for small business corporations; enables them to build up capital reserves, and that the measure is specifically designed to impose the burde of taxes on those having the ability to pay.

"In other words, the 1936 tax bill instead of soaking the little fellows, makes certain that the wealthy individuals and corporations shall contribute their just share."

Robinson said that "if Gov. Landon is really concerned about 'hidden taxes' on the consumer, it might be suggested that we return to Kansas and remove some of those levies imposed by his own administration."

U. S. Railroads Double Income; Expenses, Taxes Also Increase

By Sidney Olson.

One hundred and thirteen of the country's Class 1 railroads reported last night their July net operating income was more than double that for the same month last year—jumping to $61,133,129, as compared with $26,706,706 for last July.

The officers of 23 Eastern railroads, now busy with court appeals to revoke the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission lowering passenger fares, are still uncertain to the cause of the increase, however.

Recent interviews with these executives have revealed they hold the increase to be due to better business as much as to the slashed rates.

The reports, virtually complete for the 30-day period composing the second month of the new low rates, showed that total operating revenues of the Class 1 roads were $339,571,951, compared with $240,161,731 for July, 1935, an increase of 27.4 per cent.

In sharp contrast to this optimistic picture, the report noted operating expenses totaling $240,161,731, compared with $210,611,046 for July, 1935, had risen 14 per cent, and that taxes had jumped 40.9 per

Tighten Grip Of Sanctions, Russia Urges

Proposes Military Steps Be Authorized for Parties to Pacts.

Argentina Asks Kellogg Treaty's Use; Church Warns Germany.

European Situation.

Soviet Russia last night asked the League of Nations to amend its Covenant to provide for immediate application of military sanctions by nations with mutual assistance pacts, in event of war.

Roman Catholic priests throughout the Reich will give warning from their pulpits tomorrow that Germany "may go the way of Spain."

Official papers in Moscow charged Reichsfuehrer Hitler is leading Europe "closer to slaughter." Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, German economic dictator, was quoted in Paris papers as saying Germany would settle its quarrel with the Soviet if the latter would abandon "virulent propaganda."

Soviet Asks Change.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Aug. 28.—Soviet Russia tonight asked the League of Nations to amend its Covenant to provide immediate application of military sanctions by nations having a mutual assistance pact in the event of war.

(Russia and France already have a mutual assistance pact, causing diplomatic circles have said, concern in Germany, which has resigned from the League.)

Under the Russian proposal, military, punitive sanctions could be invoked even before the League officially fixed blame for a war.

League members would agree, under the Russian plan, that application of such military sanctions would not be deemed acts of aggression.

All League members would be required to contribute to economic and financial sanctions applied by it.

The Russian proposal opposed amendment of the League Covenant as impractical; proposed instead that a special protocol be adopted whereby the League, in event of war, would summon its Council to meet within three days.

To Decide in Three Days.

By a three-quarters vote, the Council within the following three days would decide whether circumstances were such as to merit application of punitive measures.

Although the Russian plan was submitted tonight, the League Assembly does not meet until the third week in September to discuss proposals for League reform.

Earlier in the day interest at Geneva centered around recommendations that the League Covenant be cemented with the Briand-Kellogg pact outlawing war—proposals believed to have been contained in an Argentine communication.

Co-ordinating of peace measures also would include provisions of a peace pact signed at Rio de Janeiro in 1933, it was believed.

This reported move shaped up with opinions that the League is due for various reforms because of its failure to stop the Italo-Ethiopian war last year.

A provision of the Argentine proposal was said to recommend international extension of the American doctrine of nonrecognition of territory acquired by force.

Press Assails Nazis.

Papers in Moffett, Farnsworth Cases Found Identical

Secret Navy papers, loss of which brought about the court-martial of Lieut. William A. Moffett, jr., bore the same title, "The Service of Information and Security," as those which John S. Farnsworth, dismissed officer, is accused of selling to the Japanese government, it was learned yesterday.

High Navy officials, however, denied any connection between the two cases and said loss of the papers will not embarrass or seriously interfere with national defense plans.

Lieut. Moffett, 28-year-old son of Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, killed in the crash of the dirigible Akron, was convicted on charges of carelessness and reduced 50 points in rank. The papers, which he had borrowed to study for an examination for lieutenant, senior grade, disappeared from his automobile last May.

Yesterday, young Moffett attended the launching at the Boston Navy Yard of the new destroyer, Moffett, named in honor of his father. He was dressed in civilian clothes, and according to dispatches from Boston, was warmly greeted by Admiral Walter R. Gherardi, commandant of the First Naval District.

Lieut. Moffett will not come up for promotion until next year or later. Officials could not say whether the court-martial will count against him when his service record is examined by the selection board. Meanwhile, he will continue in the aviation service at the Anacostia naval airport, it was said.

D.C. Attorney Is Indicted in Robbery Ring

John W. Tomlinson, 42, Counsel for Means, Held in Bond.

Is Called Master-Mind in Capital Holdups; 3 Others Jailed.

John William Tomlinson, 42, a quiet, well-thought-of member of the District bar, stood accused last night of being the "master mind" of a gang of colored hold-up men.

The grand jury indicted Tomlinson for two robberies, and at the same time indicted three of his alleged colored confederates.

Headquarters detectives said the three colored men had signed statements accusing Tomlinson of planning the hold-ups which they carried out.

High police officials expressed astonishment when Tomlinson was released on $2,000 bond, $1,000 on each charge. They had suggested a bond of $20,000, but United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett thought this excessive and ordered the $2,000 bond.

Capt. Ira Keck, assistant chief of detectives, said:

"We wanted Tomlinson's bond set as high as possible, because with him at liberty our investigation might be hampered.

"We were surprised at the low bond set by the district attorney, but there is nothing we can do about it."

After setting the bond, Garnett left town for the week-end. His subordinates refused to raise the amount of the bond when police protested.

After his release on bond, Tomlinson walked briskly away from the courthouse alone, while photographers sought to take his picture. He had been a prisoner of the police since Sunday, and his face was covered with a stubble of red beard.

Was Means' Attorney.

A few years ago Tomlinson was an associate counsel in a notable trial in the courthouse. His client was Gaston B. Means, who was convicted of swindling Mrs. Edward B. McLean of $104,000 on a promise to return the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

It became known several days ago that police were holding a "prominent Washington attorney," and that they suspected him of being implicated in a recent series of robberies. Not until yesterday, however, were the police ready to file their charges and submit the evidence to the grand jury.

The revelation that Tomlinson was the lawyer in question created something of a sensation in legal circles. His colleagues knew him as a retiring, studious type of fellow. He was graduated from the Georgetown University Law School in 1922. While he was a student, it was recalled, he attended church regularly, sometimes daily for long periods.

Tomlinson, the son of a merchant-farmer, came here from North Carolina. He attended Wake Forest College, which gave him a degree of bachelor of arts. In choosing a professional career, he deliberated between the law and medicine. He decided on medicine and accordingly entered the University of North Carolina. After two years of preparation for a doctor's career, however, he decided he preferred the law, and so entered Georgetown University Law School.

After obtaining his degree, he was associated with W. Gwynne Gardiner, a former District Commissioner. In 1926 he opened his own law office in the Woodward Building.

Tomlinson was arrested Sunday

Tokyo, Aug. 29 (Saturday) (AP).—Hundreds of persons died in a typhoon which swept across the China Sea and ravaged the southeastern provinces of Korea, it was disclosed today.

Execution of 100 In Fire Reprisal Laid to Loyalists

Sweeping Victory Claimed by Leftists

Madrid Push Believed Started; Insurgents in Repulse at Irun.

The Spanish Revolt.

One hundred rebel sympathizers, many of them formerly high officials in the government, were executed in Madrid as an "object lesson," it was reported last night.

Loyalists claimed a major victory in a 10-hour battle in Lozoya Valley, north of Madrid, as the rebels apparently started the long-awaited push on the capital.

Italy clamped an embargo on munitions to the Spanish belligerents.

The rebels launched a heavy night attack on government-held Irun in the north after an earlier assault had been beaten back with severe losses.

At Burgos insurgent leaders said if the revolt succeeds they will set up a dictatorship and later conduct a plebiscite on the return of former King Alfonso to the throne.

100 Rebels Executed.

By the Associated Press.

Toulouse, France, Aug. 28.—A hundred Spaniards who turned to the Fascist rebel cause, many of them from high government positions, were reported tonight by the French press to have been executed in Madrid in a sudden government reprisal.

The hapless 100 reputedly attempted to burn a model jail in the capital in which they were being held.

The executions, it was reported, were carried out as an object lesson to survivors.

Among those reported slain were:

Jose Martinez de Velasco, former foreign minister.

Melquiades Alvarez, former cabinet minister.

Gen. Oswaldo Fernando Capaz, former military commander in Morocco.

Admiral Francisco Salas, former minster of marine.

Rico Avello, former minister of the treasury and high commissioner in Morocco.

Dr. Jose Maria Albinana, leader of the National Traditionalist Party.

The Marquis de Urquijo, banker.

Fernando Primo de Rivera, cousin of the Fascist leader.

While the news of the alleged execution still was spreading through the city, word was brought that a rebel airplane yesterday added propaganda leaflets to its load of bombs dropped on Madrid.

Refugees said a sergeant was killed, four persons seriously wounded and an airplane destroyed at the Cuatro Vientos Airdrome.

The tracts advised the government soldiers to leave their arms in civil guard barracks and return to work.

The rebels "already are masters of all Spain except Madrid, Barcelona and Valencia," the rebel announcements declared.

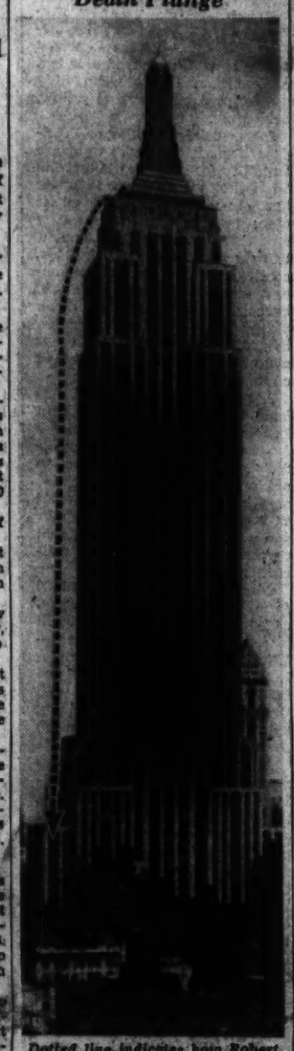
Death Plunge



Dotted line indicates how Robert P. Erskine, newspaper reporter, missed three setbacks in his suicide leap from the eighty-sixth floor of Empire State Building.

86-Story Leap From Building Kills N.Y. Youth

Reporter Waves Farewell to Companions, Drops to Street Below.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 28.—With a smiling farewell, "So long, folks," Robert Francis Erskine, a young newspaper reporter, pushed himself from the parapet on the eighty-sixth floor of the Empire State Building today and hurtled to his death on the sidewalk 1,050 feet below.

Erskine, 23, a reporter for the Bronxville, N. Y., Press, shot past three setbacks and smashed at the rate of about 4 miles a minutes into the sidewalk on West Thirty-third street.

A half-dozen sightseers on the observation tower floor saw him wave a newspaper, clamber over the ledge and spin out into space.

Building engineers estimated he traversed the distance, equal to the length of a 15-car railroad passenger train, in 8 1-10 seconds.

A photographer had asked the youth, who was a member of a party being guided about the tower, whether he wanted his picture taken.

Erskine nodded in assent and moved back to the parapet.

"So Long, Folks."

He thrust one leg over it and sat there a moment. He looked down.

"So long, folks," he said, and leaped, arms outstretched.

The body lunged outward 30 feet, clearing the setbacks in its downward plunge.

Fugitive, Wife Indicted Here In $50,000 Gem-Theft Case

Indictments charging a couple with transporting stolen jewelry across State lines were returned yesterday by the District grand jury, capping nine months of investigation by Department of Justice agents and Capital police.

Mrs. Eula Mae Bennett, arrested here last October, and her husband, James Bennett, were cited in the bills. The woman is at liberty under $5,000 bond and Bennett never has been apprehended since he evaded a police trap in an L street cafe last fall.

Detectives assert they found more than $50,000 worth of jewelry in the Bennett apartment at the time of the woman's arrest.

The grand jury, reporting to Justice James M. Proctor in District Court, was told that a bracelet valued at $5,000, reported as being stolen from the home of Richard C. McAdow, jr., in Greenwich, Conn.; two rings, valued at $3,450, identified as the property of Lamont T. Hodge, superintendent of schools of Yonkers, N. Y., and a $400 ring, identified as the property of Elsie V. Fitchen, of New York City, were found in the room allegedly occupied by the Bennetts.

The major portion of the silverware and jewelry has remained unclaimed and police are wondering what to do with it. Unless some-

New Deal Starts Fiscal Surveys To Show Gains

Hopes to Answer Landon Strictures on Finances, Observers Believe.

By Robert C. Albright.

An eleventh-hour effort on the part of the Administration to brighten the budget outlook and to improve a fiscal picture that has been increasingly vulnerable to political attack, was in full swing here yesterday.

Resurveys of the financial condition of Government departments, studies of improving revenue prospects and revision of current fiscal year estimates, dovetailed into the quest for a more favorable financial prospectus.

In at least one instance of tightening up of Administration spending policies, the move was attributed to a desire by the President to conserve available funds. In refusing greatly to modify his restrictions on new PWA outlays, the President was said in one quarter to have been influenced by a desire to hold in reserve recoverable assets and funds that otherwise would be paid out in grants.

Efforts to bulwark an unhappy fiscal picture anticipated Gov. Alf M. Landon's aggressive attack on Treasury policies and appear to have been given added impetus by the Kansan's Buffalo speech.

May Be Campaign Material.

Results of the studies now going forward and predictions of a happier fiscal outlook for the future are expected to be incorporated in rebuttal Administration speeches before the campaign gets much farther along.

A series of movies pointing to this conclusion was reviewed here yesterday by observers. They include:

Secretary Morgenthau's letter to the President August 10 on the "steadily increasing" yield of existing taxes.

The White House conference with Congressional leaders two weeks ago, resulting in a promise of no new taxes, and of possible tax alteration to remove inequalities.

Budget conferences last Sunday of the President, Secretary Morgenthau, Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell; George C. Haas, director of research of the Treasury, and Herbert C. Gaston, assistant to Morgenthau in charge of publicity.

Resulting studies looking to revision of 1937 fiscal year estimates, and a possible slash in the year's $3,000,000,000 deficit, by marking off unexpected revenue increases.

Intimations of a forthcoming prediction of a balanced annual budget in the 1938 fiscal year, if the budget studies now under way can justify such a forecast. Secretary Morgenthau has refused to confirm or deny such a possibility.

Other Happenings.

Coincident with these developments, a number of other recent happenings have contributed to the impression that the Administration is preparing to put up the strongest possible fiscal front.

Early this week the President conferred with Carter Glass, of Virginia, outstanding Senate banking authority, on details of a more optimistic financial outlook.

Observers also attached significance to the recent confidential study made by the President of comparative WPA and PWA costs and methods, and the recheck of WPA rolls the United States Employment Service has been ordered to make.

Awaits President's Return.

Announcement of the revised current fiscal year estimates, with a probable deficit slash, is expected to follow President Roosevelt's return from the West. It may be made by President Roosevelt personally or by Acting Budget Director Bell.

It is still a question whether the President will go so far as to predict a balanced annual budget for the fiscal year, 1938. Assuming that $1,000,000,000 to $1,500,000,000 of relief expenditures are asked next session, revenues would have to range as high as $7,500,000,000 in the next fiscal year in order to justify such a prediction.

In the first two months of the 1937 fiscal year, the statement showed the Government had paid out $910,755,382 in expenditures, while collecting $600,518,439 in revenues.

An improvement in the relationship between spending and receipts was noted over last year, however. In the corresponding period a year ago, the Treasury paid out $1,195,023,912, while it was collecting only $549,630,110 in revenue.

Test Action Filed On Commodity Act

Kansas City, Aug. 22 (AP).—Charging an infringement of States' rights, the Kansas City Board of Trade challenged constitutionality of the new commodity exchange act in a suit filed in Federal Court here today.

The petition stated that "buying and selling of grain for future delivery is in each and every instance intrastate commerce and such transactions do not require or provide for shipment or transportation from one State to another, and do not directly involve any shipments in interstate commerce."

"Congress has no power under the Constitution," the exchange asserted, "to take over the general control and regulation of grain exchanges. Such control and regulation has been retained by and is vested exclusively in the respective States under the provisions of the tenth amendment to the Constitution."

The petition also attacked the act as "an improper delegation of legislation and judicial power and authority upon the Secretary of Agriculture."

Divorce Suit Dropped.

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP).—A divorce suit brought by Theodore Krol, Chicago securities salesman, and a cross bill filed by his wife, the former Virginia Lee Corbin, 24, a juvenile movie star of a decade ago, were dismissed by mutual consent in Circuit Court today. A reconciliation was indicated by Judge Harry M. Fisher.

North Dakota Drought Area Presents Vivid Picture of Desolation.

By Franklyn Waltman

EN ROUTE With President Roosevelt Through Drought Area in the Dakotas, Aug. 28.—Having traveled between 400 and 500 miles in the last two days by airplane, train and automobile over these drought-stricken plains, chiefly in North Dakota, I have found a country severely ravished by nature — wheat and corn which reached a height of less than 1 foot when fully grown, parched land, and yellow, dead grass.

WALTMAN.

AAA officials traveling on President Roosevelt's special train are authority for the estimate that the two Dakotas will harvest this year but one-fourth of their wheat crop; that in the entire spring area this year's crop will amount to only about 110,000,000 bushels, compared with a normal production of approximately 200,000,000 bushels. In many sections down along the one-hundredth meridian the entire wheat and corn crops were burned out by heat and lack of rainfall.

A railroad official aboard this train tells me that the Northern Pacific anticipated this summer a freight movement of approximately 12,000 cars in one section of North Dakota but that only 400 cars have materialized. He said that one good rain two months ago would have meant additional revenue of $5,000,000 to that railroad alone.

Of the approximately 84,000 farm families in North Dakota, 53,000 today are being supported by the Federal Government—WPA taking care of approximately 33,000, paying the heads of the family about $44 a month, with the other 20,000 families receiving grants—in aid and loans from the Resettlement Administration.

Although in the towns of Bismarck and Jamestown, and adjacent country in North Dakota, the people who lined the streets and roads to see the President appeared well-fed, healthy and comfortably clothed—even well-dressed—it appears certain that this year's drought left thousands of North Dakota families destitute, the more helpless because of the impossibility of growing even the simplest food.

Having said all that as a preface in order to avoid giving the impression that the great plains drought area is not serious, I propose to undertake a little debunking of some of the propaganda regarding this situation current in the East.

The situation in the drought area is serious and deserves the earnest consideration of the Federal Government, both from a short range viewpoint of relieving destitution, as well as a long range problem in proper land use, conservation and soil erosion prevention.

But all this talk about this area being a great American desert is nonsense. Nor is it a dust bowl. The dust bowl is farther south, in eastern Colorado and western Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

On every side you find resentment among residents of talk that this country has become permanently impaired and that it eventually would become necessary to depopulate large areas. On every side some old fellow explains that with several good rains at the proper periods this is a prosperous country and that with two good crop years this region could pay off all its debts and rehabilitate itself, despite the dreadful droughts of 1934 and this year, grasshopper plagues and wheat rust.

The rain which fell yesterday and this morning over a large part of the region covered by President Roosevelt has quickly revived the spirits of the people and some of the remaining vegetation. For instance, the Aberdeen News today reported that the President had arrived "to find this portion of the 'dust bowl' muddy—so muddy, in fact, that a scheduled tour of the nearby countryside remained doubtful until after midday."

Land which can be turned into mud so quickly is not a dust bowl—the term is used sarcastically out here—nor is it a desert. Indeed, an Aberdeen resident, who has lived here 36 years, said he could remember only four serious crop failures in that period. He said there were five or six bumper crops in the period, while the remainder were normal—which means good.

But, you object, how about those pictures published in Eastern newspapers showing cows forced to graze on the Capitol lawn at Bismarck; how about that picture of a sandy waste in North Dakota with the gruesome skull of a cow in the foreground, a pictorial presentation conveying the thought of cattle dying from hunger and thirst?

Well, those pictures were fakes—published in good faith by the Eastern newspapers, but faked by those who originated them. In President Roosevelt's party, I visited a farm near Jamestown, N. Dak., this morning, where one of the correspondents found lying nearby the jawbone of a horse and several white-charred bones. A photograph might have been taken of those bones and truthfully labeled, "found on a North Dakota farm," but it would have been a fake—for that horse died a natural death several years ago. And no livestock has died in this area as a result of the drought.

The disturbing thing about one of the pictures recently published in the East, held here to be a fake, is that is was given to the Photographic News Service by the Resettlement Administration. Their photographer at Bismarck, who sent the picture in, said today it was a true picture, but the Fargo Forum has branded it as "fake."

This is a picture showing the skeleton of the cow skull lying on an alkali waste. The Forum termed the skull "a movable prop which comes in handy for photographers who want to touch up their pictures with a bit of the grisly."

As for the photograph showing cattle grazing on a lawn of the State Capitol at Bismarck—it is two pictures, one of a cattle field superimposed on a picture of the Capitol. There is no grass at the rear of the Capitol, where these cows supposedly were grazing. There is a graveled parking lot there.

The drought problem out here is serious enough and requires intelligent action above the average, without distorting the picture. Indeed, it is a little difficult to get at the truth of the situation. Some groups wish to make it appear worse than it is, for political or other purposes, while other groups—chiefly business men out this way—try to minimize the seriousness of the situation because adverse reports hurt business.

Resettlement Administration with its propaganda motion picture, "The Plow That Broke the Plains," overdramatizes the situation. I am told that nowhere in the great plains drought area are conditionas as bad as those presented in that picture. Certainly they are not in the Dakotas. The picture was shot, I am told, on the edge of the Nebraska sand hills.

Why the Resettlement Administration should undertake to distort the true situations in the two incidents mentioned, I do not know. But it does not contribute either to an understanding or a solution of the real problem which exists.

Rail Income Doubled

cent, from $19,293,023 in July of last year, to $27,177,982 for July, 1936.

Eastern roads, while almost doubling their net income over last July, still did not equal in percentage the tremendous increases rolled up by the Southern and Western railways, which tripled and doubled, respectively, their July, 1935, records.

The Eastern rail executives have noted this factor as a partial proof of their contention that better business conditions account for the travel increase, reminding that the Western and Southern roads were not affected by the order, as they have been operating experimentally under the low rates for some time.

The order by the Interstate Commerce Commission reduced coach fares from 3.6 cents per mile to 2 cents, eliminated the surcharge for Pullmans and cut the Pullman fare to 3 cents.

The carloading figures, released at the same time, totaled 734,973 cars. This was 109,199 cars above the same 1935 week.

	1936.	1935.
Operating income	$339,571,951	$266,583,197
Operating expenses	240,161,731	216,611,048
Taxes	27,177,982	19,293,023
Net Operating Income.
83 East. railroads	$32,693,154	$16,860,173
25 South. railroads	6,060,554	1,983,122
35 West. railroads	61,133,129	26,706,708

The revenues of the Class 1 railroads, the Association of American Railroads said in the report, represent 96.8 per cent of the total operating revenues of all American railroads.

Bus travel, in the meantime returned to a slightly-above-normal position during July, figures showed, after a small June drop, when rail rates were first slashed in the East. Bus lines cut their fares almost at the same time.

Air lines, which did not cut rates, enjoyed a steady increase in travel during June, according to Department of Commerce statistics, which are incomplete for July as yet. In June, 1936, a total of 97,453 passengers were carried, as compared with 73,896 in June of last year.

Drowned Children Buried in District

Funeral services for Shirley Richards, 8, and her cousin, Clayton Higdon, jr., 9, were held here yesterday. The youngsters drowned Wednesday in the Patuxent River, near Benedict, Md.

The services, for Shirley, daughter of Mrs. Maude Richards, of 1603 Kearney street northeast, were held at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Clayton was buried in Fort Lincoln Cemetery after funeral services held at his home, 2615 Twenty-second street northeast. He was a second grade student at Langdon School.

carried him from Bismarck eastward to Jamestown, N. Dak., and then southwesterly into South Dakota through Aberdeen, on the way to Pierre.

Inspects WPA Projects.

He inspected several WPA projects, including excavation for an artificial lake and construction of a dam to create a similar body of water; talked over the drought situation with a farmer who had repaid one-third of a Resettlement Administration rehabilitation loan; conferred with officials of the two States and played counting fingers with a 20-month-old baby.

The latter incident took place at the farm of Henry Welbers, about 10 miles from Aberdeen. Welbers had borrewed $1,154 to buy some sheep and despite a complete crop failure has earned by outside work enough to retire $400 of the debt. The President called on him to discuss his problems after inspecting a large dam being constructed across a ravine enarby. Mrs. Welberg brought her baby girl, Darlene, in her arms, to the President's automobile.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke to the child as the photographers crowded around and then as she smiled into his face he counted one to five and touched each of the fingers. A pohtographer who had lost out on the picture, called out to the President, "do that again, Mr. President." Mr. Roosevelt did apparently much to the delight of the baby.

Area Badly Affected.

The country through which Mr. Roosevelt passed today has been as seriously affected by the drought as any part of the Northwest. The drought struck in this area, for instance, much harder than it did in the country around Fargo, over which The Post correspondent flew yesterday. Incidentally, on the way to join, by airplane, the President's tour of the drought country, The Post correspondent had the novel experience of being delayed four hours by heavy rains and mist between Chicago and Fargo.

The President today referred to the rain which has fallen in this area in the last 48 hours, recalling that his luck still holds good since two years ago, when he passed through this section from the Pacific Coast, rain followed him. In most of this region the rain of yesterday and this morning was the first seen in many weeks. The normal precipitation for this area is about 17 inches annually. So far this year the rainfall has averaged between 5 and 6 inches.

Perhaps the recent rain hads omething to do with it, but in many places the plains did not conform to the descriptions of extreme desolation attributed ot them in some reports. The wheat and corn crop in many places has been lost completely, reaching a height of not more than a foot or two. Pasture land also has been severely seared, while many waters holes are dry. But here and there were gren fields some containing grass, others Russian thistle. Stacks of hay and straw in fields and outside barns were not infrequent sights for these farms.

One Killed as Gale Hits Terre Haute

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 28 (AP).—A 56-mile-an-hour wind storm struck this city and nearby territory late today, killing at least one person and injuring an undetermined number of residents. Damage was estimated at between $500,000 and $700,000.

The gale, accompanied by a severe electrical display, cut a wide swath through most of the city, blowing down trees and utility poles and damaging homes and automobiles.

Electric wires which fell on houses and business establishments started several fires.

The dead person was identified as Bobby Baker, 6, killed instantly when a tree fell onto a tent in which he was living. His mother, Mrs. Bertha Reynolds, suffered a fracture of the arm and other injuries.

Couple in Suicide Mimics Execution

Huntington Park, Calif., Aug. 28 (U.P.).—A young man who had lost his job and "did not believe in God" lay down with his pretty young wife in a home-made lethal chamber today, and enacted a bizarre replica of a legal execution.

Several hours later police, wearing gas masks, found the bodies of the man, 28-year-old Durand V. Clevenger, and his wife, Grace, 24, lying on the floor beside a pan of deadly chemicals used to execute condemned criminals in States where lethal gas is used.

The girl, slim and white in a fresh new pink dress, had rouged her cheeks and reddened her lips. Young Clevenger wore neatly pressed, clean gray trousers, a white shirt and tie. Their home had been stripped of furniture, sold to buy food.

False Alarm Sounded At National Savings

Flying squads of police raced to the National Savings & Trust Co., Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest, early last night in answer to a radio call announcing a burglar alarm there.

Police were greeted by Robert F. Finucane, an employe, who explained that the alarm had been touched off when a clerk had caught his sleeve on a wire in the vault.

ment projected a Middle Western trip—probably in the third week of September—through Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Missouri, with speaking engagements likely at Chicago and Milwaukee.

The Eastern tour would be constructed on an October 29 appearance at Madison Square Garden, in New York City, and probably would include speeches at Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore.

Landon advisers have discussed possibilities of another trip in the Rocky Mountain area, but said today these plans were indefinite.

Landon made the following statement upon his arrival here:

"I return to Topeka deeply gratified with my first trip of the 1936 campaign. Traveling the past eight days between the Rocky Mountains and Lake Erie I have appreciated the friendly welcome of those whom I have had the opportunity of meeting, whether it be from the rear platform of the train, aboard the train, or at West Middlesex, Chautauqua and Buffalo.

"People Much the Same."

"It has been interesting to find that the people of all of the nine States visited (the train cut through Indiana at night) are striving to solve in an honest and commonsense way their common problems. Our neighbors of Colorado and Nebraska are much the same in their thoughts and aspirations as the people of Pennsylvania and New York. And all are no different from the folks of Kansas.

"Everywhere, despite differences in geography, the people are undoubtedly interested in good government. The crowds that have gathered is proof of this interest.

"This is as it should be. It is the American way, for under the American system the people are the government. They are entitled to know the whole truth about the conduct of their public business. When they insist upon knowing, as they now do, they can be relied upon to arrive at sound conclusions.

"The interest in government as particularly shown by the women and young people is most encouraging. It is a wholesome sign when the women and the young people join their men folk in an endeavor to shape the course of government. As long as the American people take a deep interest in their public affairs all will be well for their government."

newspapers of the Soviet government and the Communist party.

"A provocative campaign of preparation for new foreign political adventures" was the way Pravda, Communist organ, and Izvestia, government mouthpiece, said they viewed the violent attacks against the Soviet Union in the German press.

Pravda declared: "It is just a smoke screen for Hitler to spring a new surprise which is demanded by his venturesome program.

"German Fascism, armed to the teeth, is preparing for new slaughter in Europe."

German preparations for war, it continued, were sending workers to the verge of food shortage and eventual starvation.

Soviet Propaganda Charged.

Paris, Aug. 28 (AP).—French newspapers tonight quoted Dr. H. Jalmar Schacht, Germany's "economic dictator," as offering to settle Germany's quarrels with Soviet Russia if the Communists would abandon "virulent propaganda."

(Chancellor Hitler in increasing Germany's fighting man power to more than 1,000,000 men this week blamed "Bolshevist peril.")

Financial newspapers quoted the president of the Reichsbank as saying the Nazis could "reach an understanding with the Soviets and work with them toward settlement of world economic and political problems" if the Russians would "give up their virulent propaganda which is troubling the world."

Church Warns Nazis.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 28.—Roman Catholic priests from their pulpits throughout the Reich Sunday will warn that Nazi Germany "may go the way of Spain."

These words, it was learned tonight, will be uttered to all Roman Catholic congregations in the form of a pastoral letter adopted by German bishops at a conference in Fulda last week-end.

The Nazi weltanschauung (world outlook) also will be excoriated as one based on blood, soil and race.

The pastoral letter will tell of the bishops' "great concern over grave losses sustained by the church in Germany in recent months," and will make note of religious persecutions in Spain.

It also will say:

"Communism will not be struck in its deepest roots by military force, but through resurrection, in Jesus Christ, of Europe in general and our fatherland in particular.

Deplore "Weltanschauung."

"No Weltanschauung based solely on blood and things temporal can help here.

"Whoever fails to oppose bolshevism in the realm of religion thereby opens the door for it to invade the political and economic realm also.

"We simply cannot understand why, in our fatherland, too, the influence of Christianity is being limited and constantly restricted to the church proper.

"We simply cannot grasp why our Catholic organizations are hindered in the beneficent work."

The bishops, however, will make clear that they are anxious for peace between Nazi-ism and Catholicism.

The bishops will further charge the church's charities in Germany are being forcibly limited, that Catholic sisters are being crowded out of hospital and kindergarten work, and that the youth of the nation has been brought under anti-Christian influences.

They also will contend confessional schools are being limited and the Catholic press muzzled.

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 28.—Representative William Lemke, Union Party Presidential candidate, arrived in Newark today with the explanation that he had come East "to see how the unemployed are getting along on a sandwich diet and less than a living wage under the dole system."

The North Dakota Representative arrived by plane and flew on to Boston. He said he would motor from there to Worcester for a speech tonight, and speak tomorrow night in New Haven, Conn.

Secretary Hull yesterday indicated he might participate actively in the Presidential campaign although he emphasized he had no definite plans thus far.

In response to a question at his press conference, he said it was quite possible he would deliver a few speeches concerning the conduct of the Nation's foreign affairs. Hull added neither the time nor the place had been considered so far.

New York, Aug. 28.—Three Democratic leaders from Kansas conferred with National Chairman James A. Farley today.

"Even the most rabid Republicans are admitting they have a hard fight on their hands," National Committeeman Lynn R. Broderick, of Marysville, Kans., said. "Of course, Gov. Landon will be helped some by State pride."

Broderick, publisher of the Marysville Advocate-Democrat, was accompanied by Mrs. Georgia N. Clark, national committeewoman, of Richland, Kans., and Howard Payne, of Olathe, Kans.

"Sentiment in four of the seven congressional districts in Kansas now favors Roosevelt," Broderick said, "while two are about evenly divided and Gov. Landon shows an advantage in the other.

"The First District, taking in the northeastern agricultural area, is Gov. Landon's best chance at the present time. The second, in which is located Kansas City, and the fourth, in the center of the State, are about even in sentiment."

The four districts in which President Roosevelt is ahead today, according to Broderick's view, are the third, comprising the territory around Independence; the Fifth, centering around Wichita, and the Sixth and Seventh, comprising the large agricultural areas in western and southwestern Kansas.

Boston, Aug. 28.—Republican campaign headquarters here today made public a statement by T. Jefferson Coolidge, former Undersecretary of the Treasury in the Roosevelt Administration, that he would vote for Gov. Alf Landon, Republican Presidential nominee. Coolidge resigned as Undersecretary last January.

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., Eastern Republican campaign manager, said today that Secretary Ickes "apparently has been glad to assume the role of chief mud slinger," in the present campaign.

Commenting on Ickes' speech last night, in which the Secretary characterized William Randolph Hearst as "the new Republican boss," Martin said:

"Chairman Farley is apparently trying to make good one of his predictions, the one given several months ago, that this was to be a dirty campaign, and Mr. Ickes apparently has been glad to assume the role of chief mud slinger."

The resettlement program of the New Deal, if carried out nationally on the scale prevailing in Sioux Falls, S. Dak., will cost $10,000,000,000, according to William Hard, Republican radio propagandist, in an address last night.

Hard, stating that Resettlement Administrator Rexford Tugwell had admitted that RA was spending $267,000 on 13 families in Sioux Falls, estimated that if the other 500,000 drought-stricken families in the Nation were "resettled" on the same scale, the total cost would amount to $10,000,000,000 through the multiplication of this number of families by $20,000 per family.

After describing the Sioux Falls project as "a purely political gesture," Hard pointed the moral of his attack in "the basic ultimate question regarding the New Dealers—are they competent to carry ideals into execution in practice? The Sious Falls project suggests the answer."

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—James Casey, managing editor of the Daily Worker and Sunday Worker, Communist Party news organ, announced tonight his withdrawal as the party's candidate for Congress from the Bronx and resignation as editor of the newspaper.

At the same time he renounced his membership in the party, stating as his reason "the Communist Party political bureau, composed of a little band of crafty misleaders, has mapped out a program to swing the support of its membership and affiliated mass organization to President Roosevelt."

"In the face of the Communist Party's complete abandonment of its professed aims through its hypocritical tactics in the present election campaign," Casey announced, "I find this course the only one I can take to maintain my self-respect."

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP).—Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National Committee, commenting on President Roosevelt's drought area tour and Secretary Ickes' radio address, asserted tonight "it might disturb both the drought-stricken farmers and Mr. Ickes to wonder if Mr. Roosevelt will keep his promises."

"President Roosevelt promises the drought-stricken farmers all sorts of help for the future on the same day that Harold L. Ickes worries publicly over whether Gov. Alfred M. Landon will keep a promise made in his acceptance speech to discuss various issues in this campaign in later talks," the Hamilton statement said.

"Promises Franklin D. Roosevelt has made in the past do not seem to have disturbed him (Ickes) much."

Urges Spanish Aid.

New York, Aug. 28.—Declaring the Roosevelt Administration's policy of "so-called neutrality" has encouraged Fascist aggression in Europe, Earl Browder, Communist candidate for President, tonight urged American support of the "Spanish people against Fascist barbarians."

Browder, in a Nation-wide broadcast, listed William Randolph Hearst as "our own Fascist" and said "it was this policy of neutrality which enabled Hearst to cloak himself and his support to the German and Italian Fascists behind a demagogic appeal for isolation."

Browder said Gov. Alf M. Landon, "who was privately nominated by Hearst months before his public nomination, is trying to get away from the hatred which millions of decent people have for Hearst."

Consumer Suit On Milk Hinges On AAA Prices

Unless the tentatively approved milk marketing agreement for the District of Columbia boosts the price Washington consumers must pay for dairy products, the Washington Consumers Council will not seek an injunction against the AAA, Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the council, announced last night.

"If the proposed agreement can continue without affecting the price the consumer must pay for milk we will not seek an injunction," Mrs. Boyle said.

Previously, the Consumers Council threatened suit if the agreement is approved by the AAA.

The agreement, written after a ten days' hearing before the AAA dairy board, provides for Government control of milk in the District of Columbia. The plan has been tentatively approved by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Wallace says the agreement, which lowers the price the distributor pays the producer for milk, should not raise the price of milk.

At the time of the hearing, however, it was thought that the AAA's plan for control—if passed—would call for a great rise in the price the distributor paid the producer for milk.

U.S. 'Fanatics' Target of Knox At G. O. P. Rally

By the Associated Press.

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 28.—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, attacked President Roosevelt tonight "for giving fanatics, theorists and impractical experimenters power and place in government."

The candidate, in an address prepared for delivery before a Statewide rally of Vermont party followers, told his audience:

"We shall expose the failures of the present Administration. We will stigmatize the deliberate attempt of the present Administration to undermine the American economic system. If this attack on error and evil constitutes a dirty campaign, Mr. Four-Job Farley can make the most of it."

Knox said his party hoped to achieve "the Coolidge sense of responsibility for the expenditures of public funds," if successful in November.

Continuing his description of the November contest, Knox said:

"We shall fearlessly expose the fads, follies and fallacies of the Tugwells, the Frankfurthers, the Walkers and the others who are ready, apparently, to scrap the American system in favor of a philosophy of government and a theory of society from Europe.

New Deal Drops 'Dictator' Plan In Soil Program

Decides to Leave Control Matters to Discretion of Various States.

By the Associated Press.

An AAA spokesman said yesterday that plans to submit standard soil conservation legislation to the States had been abandoned in an effort to nullify charges that the Administration was trying to dictate State laws.

Discussing the matter privately the spokesman asserted Federal agencies will advise with the States on request, but otherwise maintain a "hands off" policy when they undertake to write laws enabling them to co-operate with the Federal soil conservation act after Janury 1, 1938.

That is the date set by law for the termination of direct grants from the Government to farmers for soil conservation practices. Thereafter, grants will be made to States instead, on a State-aid basis, when they adopt programs which the Secretary of Agriculture finds comply with the Federal act.

At the AAA it was said the decision to leave the question of enabling leigslation entirely to State initiative was reached when "inadvertent" distribution of a "model law" prospectus drafted by AAA attorneys aroused adverse comment.

Comdr. A. S. Wolfe Dies After Crash

Commander Alfred S. Wolfe, U. S. N., who trained the Washington Naval Reserves here in 1925, when he commanded the destroyer Allen, died yesterday in New Orleans from injuries suffered in an automobile accident, the Navy Department announced. He was 45.

Commander Wolfe was on duty in New Orleans, his birthplace, as recruiting inspector of the Southern division. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Pearl Young Wolfe.

He served in the office of Naval Operations here in 1920, and then was transferred to the air station at Pensacola, Fla. Other service included commanding the Hart and John D. Edwards, service on the U. S. S. Tennessee, and at the Naval Academy.

Capt. Frederick Cook Dies in Chelsea, Mass.

Capt. Frederick Hosmer Cooke, U. S. N., head of the public works department at the Boston Navy Yard, and who at one time served in the Bureau of Yards and Docks here, died Thursday night at Chelsea Memorial Hospital, Chelsea, Mass., the Navy Department announced yesterday. He was 57.

Funeral services will be held here Monday. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. Capt. Cooke is survived by his wife, Mrs. Olga F. Cook, two sons and a daughter.

Postlude

By Ray C. Brown.

Washington Summer Concerts Association presents its eighteenth concert Friday night at the Potomac Watergate with Sylvan Levin as guest conductor and Paceli Diamond, mezzo-soprano, as soloist. Program: "Academic Festival Overture" (Brahms), ballet music from "Rosamunde" (Schubert), "Mldava" (Smetana), "Roumanian Rhapsody" No. 1 (Enescu), "L'annee en vain" from "L'Enfant Prodigue" (Debussy), "Mon coeur s'ouvre a ta voix" from "Samson et Dalila" (Saint-Saens), "Bolero" (Ravel).

Doubtless last night's assemblage at the Watergate would have been larger had not many potential auditors been intimidated by the menace of clouds. Their fears of rain were needless, for the first part of the program was played in the light of a gibbous moon. So cool was the breeze that blew up the Potomac, however, that the musicians wore their coats, and there was but slight suggestion of summer in the air.

It may have been only fancy, but one felt that there was less brio than usual in the orchestra's performance of the first two numbers. Certainly the Brahms overture did not sound festive, even in the livelier of the student songs which constitute its theme, and there was a pale joy in the "Guadeamus Igitur." Nor was there an overflowing of spirits in Schubert's ballet music, which seemed singularly sedate.

Matters improved in the Saint-Saens symphonic poem, and there was a general increase of warmth in the remainder of the program. The dynamical urgency of the poem may have started the momentum, for the climaxes were well built up and the whirling figuration went with a will. Only archeologists can tell us if Saint-Saens committed anachonism by picturing Herakles bending his enormous strength at a spinning wheel.

Inasmuch as Biedrich Smetana was an intensely nationalistic composer, it is ironic that his most frequently played symphonic poem should be almost invariably programmed in German as "Die Moldau" instead of in Czech as "Mldava." And there is injustice also to his patriotic inspiration in the fact that the other five poems which made up "My Homeland" lie neglected and unheard. Among them there are pages as beautiful as anything in "Mldava" and they deserve the attention of our conductors.

So rich are the three Rumanian rhapsodies of Enescu in folk material that one regrets that he did not give us a series of equal length with Liszt's. His skill in scoring was equal to the task, but his modesty as a composer presumably held him back.

Against the handicap of open-air vocalization, Paceli Diamond strove valiantly to project the arias by Debussy and Saint-Saens. Even with the help of the amplifier, her efforts were not entirely successful, for her voice, a natural contralto, has neither the steadiness nor the resonance for the dramatic demands of the music.

After the interminable and unvarying rhythm of Ravel's "Bolero," Sylvan Levin was recalled for an extra number. The young director, who mirrors some of Stokowski's manual manners, has a tense and constricted style of conducting which would be the better for a little relaxation and more imaginative magnetism.

Illinois Appeals Court's Voiding Of Wage Law

Review Asked in Ruling Against N. Y. Act for Women Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Pleading that States be permitted to deal with matters of "local concern," Illinois yesterday asked the Supreme Court to reconsider its decision last June 1 holding unconstitutional the New York law establishing minimum wages for women.

"When the immediate welfare of millions of American working women and the constitutional powers of the States of the Union are at stake," a petition filed by the State said, "it seems imperative that there be not even the remotest ambiguity as to the scope of decision of this court."

It was filed by Attorney General Otto Kerner, as a "friend of the court." The justices will announce in October whether a rehearing will be granted. Such action seldom is authorized.

The 5-to-4 decision delivered by Justice Butler followed a previous ruling that the Federal Government could not regulate the wages and hours of workers. Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo dissented.

"If the States are to deal effectively within their respective spheres with these matters which are traditionally and vitally of local concern," Illinois contended, "they must have power to act—so long as their action is appropriate and not arbitrary or unreasonable—as modern conditions require them to act.

"Before such a statute is finally struck down as unconstitutional by a divided court, full and unrestricted opportunity should be afforded for a mature and deliberate reconsideration upon their merits of the momentous constitutional issues."

Jewels

one appears to identify it, it will have to be returned to Mrs. Bennett.

Police first learned of the jewel cache last October, when Edward L. Strohecker, prominent real estate operator, said he had been approached by a man who attempted to sell him some valuable silverware at ridiculous prices. Strohecker communicated with detectives and a rendezvous was arranged with the then unidentified stranger at an L street tap room.

When the stranger appeared the next day with an arm full of jewels and silverware, he spotted the waiting officers and fled, dropping the valuables. Police have not definitely determined the identity of this man.

Mrs. Bennett was arrested later at her hotel, where a quantity of jewelry was found, police said, in her room. After nine months' investigation, several articles found in the apartment were traced to the owners and the grand jury was asked to indict. Armed with the indictment police and agents of the Department of Justice last night renewed their search for the missing husband.

Rally Date Is Set.

Trotzky Interned by Norway To Balk Further Rebel Plots

Bolshevist and Wife Confined to Their Country Home When He Refuses to Cease Revolutionary Activities.

By the Associated Press.

Oslo, Norway, Aug. 28.—The Norwegian government tonight interned Leon Trotzky and his wife, but whether they would be forced to leave the country was a matter of conjecture.

The minister of justice said that the exiled Russian Bolshevist leader would remain in his home at Hoenefoss "until a more suitable place could be found," but he did not indicate this necessarily meant Trotzky must find another home in Norway or leave the country.

The two male secretaries of Trotzky were under arrest tonight, but what official disposition of their cases would be made was not disclosed.

The internment order was issued after Trotzky, once the acting head of the Soviet government, had refused to desist from revolutionary activities until his permit to live in Norway expires next December 18.

It came as the climax to sensational charges that Trotzky engaged in revolutionary activity in several European countries and to his own admission, earlier in the day, that he had written letters advising revolutionary colleagues abroad.

The ministry's decision was promulgated in a brief statement which announced:

"Trotzky and Mrs. Trotzky, it was decided after a conference, would be interned in their home near Hoenefoss."

Before the statement was made public Trotzky had left the capital for the country. Authorities immediately set a close watch on him and his residence to prevent any communication with outsiders.

All telephone calls to the Trotzky home were banned. A day and night guard of eight policemen was ordered to surround it.

His segregation and confinement capped a day in which the celebrated refugee made two dramatic appearances.

Pale and evidently nervous, Trotzky told a crowded courtroom he had sent letters to France and other countries counseling adherents on revolutionary matters. His testimony was heard at the trial of five Norwegian Nazis accused of raiding his home in an unsuccessful effort to obtain supposedly subversive documents.

Crowds milled outside the heavily guarded courtroom when Trotzky left for a long conference with the justice ministry officials at which he renounced the terms of his asylum here.

Under the agreement, which it was announced earlier in the day he had reaffirmed, he was to remain in Norway until December 18 if he would adhere to the restrictions on his activities. Trotzky signed the agremenet Wednesday under threat of being arrested if he failed to do so.

Mrs. Trotzky was to have appeared at the trial as a witness, but was not called because of leg injuries she suffered in a fall.

Police escorted Trotzky, from Hoenefoss for the court appearance, guarded him closely during the session and then accompanied him back to the country after his meeting with the ministry of justice.

Only holders of special identification cards were admitted to the trial, which aroused wide interest because of the implication of Trotzky in the testimony of 16 confessed conspirators who were executed in Moscow this week for an alleged plot to assassinate Dictator Josef Stalin and overthrow the Communist regime.

Asked for his profession during the trial, Totzky responded, "I am a political and economic author."

Protest Hinted.

Moscow, Aug. 28 (AP).—Sharp attacks in the press against the Norwegian Workers Party for "shielding and defending" Leon Trotzky led to belief tonight the Soviet government may be considering a protest to Norway.

The protest, it was believed, would maintain Trotzky violated his promise not to engage in political activities if given refuge there.

"The Norwegian Workers Party," declared the newspaper Pravda, "is continuing a shameful program of defending the murderous Trotzky. By so doing it is marching hand-in-hand with Gestapo (German secret police) and is stretching anti-Soviet threads from Norway."

Pravda assailed publication in a Norwegian newspaper of a statement by Norway's minister of foreign affairs that Trotzky was not connected with an alleged plot for which 16 convicted conspirators were executed this week.

Air-Conditioning Saves Babies Born Prematurely, Forum Told

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 28.—A 26 per cent saving in lives of premature babies by air-conditioning was reported to the Harvard Tercentenary today.

Lifted from the industrial laboratories, this artificial weather apparatus supplants incubators and supplements all other treatments.

Its use was described by C. P. Yaglou, of the Harvard School of Public Health, at a symposium on environment. The incubator did mainly one thing, he said, giving a warm, uniform temperature. Air-conditioning does three—regulates humidity, temperature and air drafts.

Of these it is not the temperature so much as the humidity regulation that saves lives. Most lives were saved with "relative humidities" ranging from 50 to 75 per cent.

These humidities furnished air so moist and sticky that doctors and nurses complained about discomfort while working in the premature baby nurseries. The "relative humidity" is the per cent of moisture in the air as compared with the maximum moisture the air can contain at a given temperature.

Comparing "natural" humidities of the ordinary weather with air-conditioned humidities, Yaglou said humidities of 25 to 49 saved the lives of 9.7 per cent more babies. The 50 to 75 per cent humidity raised the saving to 26.5 per cent.

Why the humidity is so important, he said, can only be inferred. One inference is that premature babies are not yet ready for the dryness of normal temperatures. This need for humidity, he added, applies in lesser degree to normally born babies.

Loyalists Slay 100 Prisoners, French Report on the Madrid-Sierra front north of the capital, as the rebels apparently started their long-awaited "big push" on Madrid.

The war office said casualties were heavy in the Lozoya battle, but did not give any figures. Much of the fighting was hand-to-hand.

The rebel high command apparently has decided to start the big drive toward Madrid without assistance of their Estremadura forces, which still are far from the capital. The results on the Estremadura front are not clear here, however, since there has been no news from there, not even official reports, for several days.

Queipo de Llano, who many times daily broadcasts accounts of rebel victories and charges foreign aid is being given the Madrid government, said "certain nations" had been promised the Balearic Islands if they would support an independent Catalonian state.

He further charged uniformed French troops had entered Spain to fight for the loyalist forces.

Irun Battle Rages.

Irun, Spain, Aug. 29 (Saturday) (AP).—A desperate rebel drive to batter down government resistance on the northern frontier raged unabated early today after a night-long battle.

At 2:30 a. m. leaders of the defending forces admitted their munitions stores were "dangerously low." Earlier they had conceded the rebels "would be in Irun and San Sebastian in a few hours" if the insurgent forces took Fort San Marcial, the battlements which were their first objective.

The fort, however, resisted the sustained drive which marked the second pitched battle for Irun during the day. Previously government militiamen had repulsed an attack on the city, hurling homemade dynamite grenades at rebel attackers.

Insurgent troops, however, reorganized their columns and stormed the road leading to the city from their hillside encampments almost on its outskirts.

Deserters, however, from rebel ranks poured across the French boundary. One man arriving in tatters that had been a foreign legion uniform said insurgent officers drove their men against the Irun defenses at pistol point and 122 legionnaires in his company of 150 had been killed or wounded.

The almost incessant exchange lasted until midnight and the raking fantail of fire sprayed across the boundary. Bullets dropped into streets of French border towns and the police warned residents to remain indoors.

Italy Embargoes Arms.

Rome, Aug. 28 (AP).—Italy tonight clamped a tight embargo on all exports of munitions to Spain.

The embargo, which embraced a wide range of materials, surprised political circles in view of a press ministry spokesman's statement that Italy needed no embargo, but could control shipments through export permits.

They believed the embargo was declared to clarify Italy's position beyond doubt.

Newspapers continued to accuse France of sending materials to Spain for use in the civil war.

Despite embargo action sources close to the government revealed they themselves were suspicious of the effectiveness of French neutrality.

Pope Very Weary.

Rome, Aug. 28 (AP).—The voice of weary Pope Pius XI was said to be "very tired" by persons who saw the Pontiff today.

Worn down by anxiety over the Spanish civil war and its religious ramifications, the 79-year-old churchman today gave up his daily auto ride for the first time in a long while.

It was said he felt too weary to venture out in a car, but he nevertheless continued to immerse himself in the study of the Spanish situation.

King's Return Hinted.

Burgos, Spain, Aug. 28.—Fascist rebel leaders said tonight that if their forces are victorious, Spain will have first a miliary dictator similar to those in Italy and Germany, and then—if the people so desire—their former monarch, Alfonso, will return to the 300-year-old Bourbon throne.

Rigid Rules Invoked.

Madrid, Aug. 28 (AP).—The third aerial attack by rebels on Madrid this week resulted tonight in enforcement of rigid regulations to guard against Fascist bombs.

Rebel airplanes dropped explosives on the Quatro Vientos and Getafe airdromes at the capital, but the government reported there was little damage.

It also was announced there was only alight loss from the previous bombing, but from the Burgos headquarters of the rebels came the assertion that the swift onslaught had destroyed planes and caused heavy damage to the airdromes.

In a new alignment of the judicial system, Jesus Valle Fortuno was named attorney general of the Spanish government by the Socialist regime in Madrid, and in Barcelona it was announced the newly created "people's courts" would begin functioning Monday with the first trial of Fascist rebels for which the courts were created.

Previous hearings have been before military courts, and executions many times swiftly followed for the rebel defendants.

Famished Miners Won't Compromise

By the Associated Press.

Bethuen, Polish Upper Silesia, Aug. 28.—Famished and on the verge of collapse, 300 miners today spurned part settlement of their demands for back wages and resisted the fifth day of their hunger strike in their mine pit stronghold.

Although some of them had fallen from hunger and exhaustion, they refused an offer of 8,000 zlotys toward the 24,000 (about ($4,500) they claim.

As the fifth foodless day started the striking miners hoisted a "skull and crossbones" to the top of the shafthead as a grim symbol of their determination.

careless action of their employes while engaged within the scope of their employment in the shipowner's business.

4. That, on damage to person or property during carriage being shown, the burden of proof shall thereafter at all times be on the shipowner to establish that his vessel was reasonably safe or seaworthy on sailing, and that the damage did not result from carelessness of himself or his employes.

5. That this statute shall be applicable to all vessels, whether American or foreign, leaving from or entering a port of the United States.

Copies of this minority report reached other committee members after the majority report had been filed with the association, Shackleford said in asking the matter be recommitted for further action.

Was Refused Permission.

Miss Springer was denied the privilege of speaking before the House of Delegates yesterday on ground she was not a member. This morning she sought to have the reports brought before the General Assembly, but again was refused permission to speak on the matter.

The assembly, however, ordered President William L. Ransom to report that it was the members' desire that she be given an opportunity to speak before the house this afternoon.

In opening, Miss Springer recalled that next week will mark the second anniversary of the Morro Castle disaster.

"What has the American Bar Association done to prevent future tragedies?" she asked. "What has any bar association done? What has Congress done? What does the majority report do? Nothing. I submit that the report is unworthy of the American Bar Association and casts reflection upon its members."

At the final session of the assembly, members voted to "approve in principle" a Federal administrative court to take over judicial powers of Federal administrative agencies.

Bar association officers were elected as follows:

President, Frederick Harold Stinchfield, a Maine-born Minnesapolis attorney; chairman of the house of delegates, George M. Morris, Washington, D. C.; secretary, Harry S. Knight, Pennsylvania; treasurer, John W. Voorhees, Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

Board of governors—First Federal District, Louis Wyman, Manchester, N. H.; Second Circuit, Walter Fenton, Rutland, Vt.; Sixth Circuit, Newton D. Baker, Cleveland, Ohio, former Secretary of War, who was named when the original nominee, Henry S. Ballard, of Columbus, Ohio, declined to serve; Tenth Circuit, Robert Stone, Topeka, Kans., Gov. Alf M. Landon's counsel.

The board of governors, under a reorganization plan adopted Monday, corresponds to the present executive committee. Six of the present executive committeemen whose terms have not expired will retain their posts.

Meanwhile, three cities, Philadelphia, Columbus, Ohio, and Kansas City, Mo., appeared to be the leading bidders for the 1937 convention. The board of governors will hear bids tomorrow, then go into executive session and select the 1937 convention site.

Tar-Feather Victims Identify Assailants

Santa Rosa, Calif., Aug. 28 (AP).—Two victims of a Santa Rosa tar and feather attack last fall told dramatic stories today in the preliminary hearing of 21 citizens accused of kidnaping. Twelve of the men were ordered held for trial.

Silva M. A. Green, a sign painter, testified he and Sol Nitzberg, a rancher, were reviled, beaten, threatened with lynching and given a coat of black oil and feathers by an angry mob which branded them as Communists during a strike of agricultural workers.

George E. Ford, another prosecution witness, corroborated Green's story.

Green named Fred Cairns, secretary of the Healdsburg Chamber of Commerce, and Tom Campion, defendants, as being among the raiders.

86-Story Leap

"It was a friendly, kindly smile. Then he jumped."

In his pockets, they found $9 in bills and a watch and chain, but no notes. His grief-stricken father, James, and a brother were unable to suggest a possible motive for the act.

Erskine was the fourth person to be killed in a fall or leap from the building and the first one to pass the setbacks and land in the street below.

One man, C. Cass Lawler, 32, jumped from the same floor in August, 1933, and lived. He landed on a balcony a floor below and was only slightly hurt.

In April, 1931, a laborer fell to his death from an upper floor to the twenty-first floor extension.

Landed on Setback.

A man died in a leap from the 103d floor, his body landing on a setback, in November, 1932.

In February, 1935, Irma Eberhardt, after a quarrel with her fiance, made a melodramatic exit from life and landed on the marquee over the Thirty-third street entrance to the building.

The Empire State Building, 103 stories high, a total of 1,250 feet, was opened to the public May 1, 1931. It was built at an estimated cost of $51,000,000, with 85 of its floors set aside for offices. The eighty-sixth floor is an observatory. From it rises the tower stop which is a dirigible mooring mast.

Suicide leaps have been more frequent from the George Washington Bridge, the largest bridge in the world, which spans the Hudson River to connect New Jersey and New York.

Since its opening in October, 1931, 39 men and women have jumped or fallen to their deaths from the bridge, and 34 jumps were "frustrated," the Port Authority of New York, builders of the bridge, said.

night at his home in the 4100 block of Military road northwest, and was taken to the Eleventh Precinct station. He was held there incommunicado until yesterday, when the police, having rounded up and questioned the three colored men, were ready to place charges against him.

The grand jury handed down its robbery indictments after the charges had been written on the book at the detective bureau. The two cases in which Tomlinson was named a principal were:

The $3,000 pay roll robbery from the Fairfax Farms Dairy on March 14 last. Louis Black and Charles J. Weidman, employes of the dairy, had just driven up to the dairy's main office, 1620 First street northwest, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, when the bandit car drew alongside. One of the colored bandits pointed a gun at Weidman, picked up the bag containing the pay roll money and handed it to his companion. Then they sped away.

The slugging and robbery of Samuel Siratonis, proprietor of a tailor shop at 3003 Fourteenth street northwest, on August 13. Two colored men entered, one brandishing a blackjack and the other a revolver. They beat Siratonis on the head, and took $785 from his pocket. Their automobile refused to start, so they abandoned it and escaped on foot.

Automobile Was Clew.

That abandoned automobile apparently was the clew that led to the round-up of the three colored men named in the indictments, along with Tomlinson, yesterday.

They are Philip John Pratt, Walter Smallwood and Charles Henry, Bass.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, and Capt. Ira Keck, his assistant, said that the arrest of the men was expected to result in the solution of a number of other robberies and to head off a number that had been planned.

Seven detective sergeants, working under Capt. Keck, were assigned to the round-up. They were Frank O. Brass, Elmer Lewis, Paul Ambrose, J. K. Baker, Tom Sweeney, Michael Mahaney and Curtis Trammell.

Two nights ago Detectives Lewis and Ambrose arrested the third of the colored suspects in Baltimore.

Capt. Keck said that after the colored men had named Tomlinson as the "master mind" behind their robberies, the lawyer was brought to police headquarters so that he could confront them. Keck said Tomlinson had nothing to say.

After Tomlinson had been released in $2,000 bond yesterday, he said to reporters:

"There is nothing to all this."

James O'Shea, who was retained as counsel by Tomlinson, said:

"If Tomlinson is guilty of all the things the police accuse him of, he must be crazy."

Detectives said the colored men were separated when they told their stories about Tomlinson.

Tomlinson was heavily guarded by uniformed policemen when he was taken from the Eleventh Precinct to the marshal's office in the courthouse, where bond was arranged.

In serving as counsel for Gaston B. Means, Tomlinson was associated with T. Morris Wampler. Wampler later was found guilty of income tax violations, sent to jail and disbarred.

Bachelor Tax Extended.

Rome, Aug. 28 (AP).—There is to be no hiding place for the bachelor under the Italian flag.

A decree published in the official Gazette today extended to East Africa the bachelor tax in effect in Italy proper. The tax is about $9.20 a year on bachelors between 25 and 30 years old, and about $12.40 on those up to 55 years and older.

Posse Seeking Trail of Missing Judge in Desert

Reports That Prospectors Had Talked to Crater Stir New Hunt.

By the United Press.

Warner Hot Springs, Calif., Aug. 28.—A posse of deputy sheriffs and newspapermen pressed a search for a mysterious "desert rat" into the rocky desert east of here tonight after a second prospector identified a picture of Judge Joseph Crater, of New York, missing six years, as that of the strange wanderer.

Deputy Sheriff August Grand, of San Diego, who joined an expedition of Los Angeles police, said Mike Morani, 51-year-old desert nomad, reported having seen the strange traveler on a gold-hunting trip two years ago. Confronted with a picture of Judge Crater, Morani said: That's the man."

Earlier "Lucky Blackie" Blackiet bearded desert wanderer, reported to police he talked with the mysterious prospector a month ago and the man, Blackiet said, admitted he was Judge Crater, who dropped out of sight in New York on August 6, 1930.

The desert wayfarer was last seen about 12 miles from here, according to Mrs. Marie Eissenmenger, who keeps a desert trading post. She said the man bought supplies from her before heading toward the desert.

Morani gave police what they described as the "best lead we have received so far." He told of spending two months with the smooth-faced stranger in a prospecting trip.

Grand said he had known Morani for years and would "vouch for him."

Meanwhile, Blackiet offered to lead the posse to a place where he believed the mysterious prospector may have gone.

According to Blackiet, the man, whom he met in casual wanderings, said: "In another year I'll be legally dead. I hope I can stick it out that long."

Position of the boat was given as 20 miles northeast of San Marter, Colombia. It was said to be about 5 miles off the coast.

Bear Shot in Elevator After Terrorizing City

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 28 (AP).—A fugitive black bear which mistook a hotel elevator for a cage was shot to death today after terrorizing part of the downtown area 15 minutes.

It escaped from a cage on a park department truck and headed straight for the busiest section of the city. Park employes fired at the bear, inflicting wounds which put it in a fighting mood.

The angry animal invaded a garage, a bus station and finally reached a hotel lobby.

The elevator caught its eye and it lumbered in. The operator was cornered and escaped the bear's claws by inches.

Motorcycle Policeman William Nerbonne killed the bear with a single pistol shot through bars of the elevator.

Treaty Violations Denied by Japanese

Yosemite, Calif., Aug 28 (AP).—Japanese delegates reiterated before a closed session of the Institute of Pacific Relations today their conviction that the Tokyo government had not violated any treaties.

The original discussion developed when other delegates asked the Japanese if they thought their government would submit questions involving the nine-power treaty to a tribunal such as the World Court.

Culbertson on Bridge

Overcoming a Bad Break.

A very remarkable lay of cards may turn an apparent laydown contract into a problem hand. Certainly there was no question that North and South, in today's hand, reached the correct spot when they bid seven spades. But the declarer found a bad trump break and had to proceed with caution.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

♥ A K 6 2
♦ K 10 5
♣ A 6

WEST

EAST

♦ J 9 3 4

SOUTH
♠ K Q J 4 3
♦ A Q 8 2
♣ K Q

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 diam'ds	Pass	5 no trump	Pass
6 hearts	Pass	6 no trump	Pass
7 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

The asking bids and responses having located every single key card, the grand slam was bid in almost perfect safety. Without the use of asking bids, it is doubtful that anything except a "stab bid" by one partner or the other could have taken them past six odd. North, despite his 4½ honor tricks, would have to fear a losing heart or diamond in the combined hands; South might depend on North's terrific bidding for three aces and one king, but hardly could feel certain about the necessary second king, or a singleton diamond.

Had declarer not found all four outstanding trumps bunched in one hand, he could have spread his cards on the table, since then he could ruff his fourth losing diamond. But when he had won West's club opening and laid down the king of spades, the bad news burst on him. Now it would be much too dangerous to find out whether a diamond ruff would be necessary. West might ruff the third round (as indeed he would have). Of course, the contract still was safe if the diamonds should break 3-3. Rather than investigate before drawing trumps, declarer decided to play for a diamond break, or a squeeze. He led out four trumps and called his other club trick. East followed to the two club tricks, but could not find safe discards for all the trumps. As a matter of fact, East was squeezed so easily that it almost spoiled the fun. He could not even discard safely on the fourth trump since with only seven cards left, he had to keep four hearts to prevent the ruffing out of dummy's suit, and four diamonds, to stop South's secondary suit. Thus, declarer having avoided the pitfall of trying for a diamond ruff, the grand slam contract was brought in easily.

Comedy Is King On New Bill at Loew's Capitol

Screen and Stage Conspire to Leave the Audience Limp From Laughter.

"SING, BABY, SING." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Milton Sperling and Jack Yellen, adapted to the screen by the authors and Harry Tugend, featuring Adolphe Menjou, Alice Faye, Ted Healy, Gregory Ratoff, Patsy Kelly, Michael Whalen, the Three Ritz Brothers, Montagu Love, Dixie Dunbar, Paul Stanton, Douglas Fowley, Tony Martin, Virginia Field and Paul McVey. Directed by Sidney Lanfield. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Perhaps you remember such hilarious items in the evolution of the cinema as "Twentieth Century," "Six of a Kind," "International House," or some of the others of the completely lunatic adventures in celluloid that have been contrived for the sheer purpose of a momentary and momentous indulgence in contagious and crazy fun. I hope so. Because, if you do, the task of classifying "Sing, Baby, Sing" is vastly simplified.

BELL.

Here is a picture that belongs in that category of hits that has place only for subjects of utter insanity, high-pressure comedy and gay songs and ensembles. There is neither an idle nor a fruitless instant in the whole mad scramble of a group of mad entertainers and their agents to get themselves somewhere in the fields of radio and night clubs. The fun is fast and furious, the music is tuneful and whistleable and the whole merry business is executed with a precision, breakneck speed and all-around skill that stamp this deft bit of foolery one of the priceless lunacies of its season.

An Odd "Coincidence."

There is, to be sure, an inescapable sugestion of the transcontinental "Caliban" and "Ariel" business that occupied the headlines of the daily press for a time, but responsibility for any resemblance of the plot's fiction to notorious fact is dissipated—one hopes—by a prefatory note blaming the whole thing on the long arm of coincidence.

There is no profit to anyone in any attempted resume of the "plot" of this nonsensical hodge-podge. Alice Faye does some of her best singing to open the frenzied goings-on, the Three Ritz Brothers, a trio of the most resourceful low comedians the present-day theater can boast, pop in and out of the proceedings with devastating effect, Ted Healy and Patsy Kelly perform with characteristic abandon and Adolphe Menjou contributes a magnificently overacted impersonation of the "greatest actor on the American stage or screen" out on the loose in search of relaxation after 15 consecutive feature pictures without a day off. His idea of "relaxation" is a gallonage consumption of "South American brandy," which in point of fact is plain bay rum with a 61 per cent alcoholic content. How all of these ridiculous people finally concentrate on a de luxe radio broadcast comprises the gist of the story and the film's cyclonic action.

Music Part of Plot.

The song numbers of which there are many are melodious and introduced logically and effectively as an aid, rather than impediment to the advancement of the thoroughly cockeyed story of an uphill fight for recognition in "show business" and absolution from the unfortunate consequences of a "hot" front page story. Through all of this high-strung narrative in addition to those already named, Gregory Ratoff batters his amusing way by the sheer comedy of a rich dialect and a dynamic personaltiy that have no exact counterpart in the contemporary theater.

And those Three Ritz Brothers are a tower of strength to any entertainment aiming only to roll the customers in the aisles rather than uplift them by any display of subtlety or finesse. The Ritz boys are exceedingly funny in a volcanic sort of way and their versatility seems to know no end.

Stage Stands Pat.

On the stage, the bill also runs largely to melody and mirth. The vaudeville portion of the pastiming is opened by the Jans and Lynton Revue, an interval of dance and accordion virtuosity that started things off with a bang. Then appear the charming Frazee Sisters in a group of current song hits, shown off to an advantage as eye-opening as that accorded their figures by those close-fitting sequin gowns. Al Norman is next on the roster with his familiar banter and two dancing stooges and scores the same hit he always has with the same sure-fire material, which has not been changed one iota since his last appearance on the same stage.

Frank and Milt Britton and their band of musical vandals are others who return to the Capital with a time-honored turn that never seems to lose its power to knock audiences off their chairs. This probably is the theater's high point in slapstick and not too-delicate comedy. Rough but riotous.

Phil Lampkin's "Bolero" (Ravel's) overture and the Fox Movietone News augment a program that is unreservedly recommended to all who remember how to laugh—and enjoy it.

Mr. McGonigle Plays Some Croquet

Although a trifle off his best stroke in the wicked wicket game of the gay 90s, the amiable mountebank impersonated by W. C. Fields in "Poppy," a film version of his old stage success, manages to make a prodigiously deep impression upon Catherine Doucet in the role of the counterfeit heiress to Miss Rochelle Hudson's millions. These agreeable people took up their celluloid duties on the screen the Columbia yesterday after a recent week at Loew's Capitol.

Metropolitan

"RHYTHM ON THE RANGE." Paramount picturization of a story by Melvin J. Houser, adapted to the screen by Walter DeLeon, Francis Martin, John C. Moffit and Sidney Salkow, starring Bing Crosby, supported by Frances Farmer, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Samuel S. Hinds, Warren Hymer, Louise Webster Gleason, George E. Stone and Martha Sleeper. Directed by Norman Taurog. Reviewed Friday afternoon (repeat engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

To the followers of traditional "horse operas" it is no news that singing cowboys are in the ascendancy. The cognoscenti, however, may not be so thoroughly informed, but now that "Rhythm on the Range" is continuing its downtown run at the Metropolitan Theater that fact must become apparent.

With Bing Crosby starred, the musicalized horse opera becomes a subject to be considered and, although the customary Western action is largely omitted, there is plenty of atmosphere of the wide-open spaces and lots of good entertainment.

The appeal and the work of Mr. Crosby here need no further expostulation. He is up to standard in every way. Three others of the company may be mentioned as adding peculiarly to the merits of the production. First is Bob Burns, the "bazooka" virtuoso, who makes his screen debut and is no less funny than he was on the occasion of his personal appearance at the Earle Theater last season. Then there is Martha Raye, a comedienne of attainment, who further abets the hilarity of the occasion. Finally, there is Louise Webster Gleason—good old Mrs. Jimmy—as the mannish lady rancher. Frances Farmer, playing opposite Mr. Crosby, is her own good and sufficient "notice."

Several songs are introduced in the course of the action by Mr. Crosby who, with and without ensemble, warbles in his best manner.

"Glimpses of the Heart of Paris," a Screen Traveler subject, tops the supplementary program. "Hawaiian Birds" is a pleasing Color Classic (cartoon) of avian melodrama. Combined releases of the Paramount and Universal newsreels round out a program that is heartily recommended.

Columbia

"POPPY." Paramount picturization of the stage play by Dorothy Donnelly, adapted to the screen by Waldemar Young and Virginia Van Upp, starring W. C. Fields, with Rochelle Hudson, Richard Cromwell, Catherine Doucet, Lynne Overman and Maude Eburne. Directed by A. Edward Sutherland. Reviewed Friday afternoon (repeat engagement) by Sally Stroud.

All the reliable Fieldsian paraphernalia are here: the shell game, tall hat, trick cane, professorial tail coat and the endearing bombastic utterances which he uses to extricate himself from all difficulties. He looks and talks as he always has and, as a consequence, Dr. Eustace P. McGargle (W. C. Fields to you) has to do very little else to incite laughter.

Since part of his comic appeal consists of his getting into ridiculous situations and wiggling out of them with the assistance of pompous remarks and devastating asides, we see him in a series of amusing scenes. He sells patent medicine guaranteed to grow hair on anything but an eight ball, demonstrates his claim to be world champion croquet player, etc., and through it all would have one believe him a "helpless pawn of Beelzebub and Looooocifer."

Rochelle Hudson is his adopted daughter who fails (in almost literal sense) into a heap of money; Catherine Doucet and several other reliable character actors supply small-town atmosphere; Richard Cromwell is the mayor's son who is soo-o happy if Rochelle will but walk thru the carnival grounds with him.

Full of homely humor and flavored with provincialisms as old-fashioned as the braid on Rochelle's dress, this story can be recommended for the entire family. Because Fields, in spite of his insistence to the contrary, "gives the sucker an even break."

A musical comedy, shots of Banff and Lake Louise thru Fitzpatrick's colored travel-talks and a timely newsreel finish out the bill. In the latter, you may see Jesse Owen, Eleanor Holm Jarrett, Gov. Landon, at West Middlesex, and scenes of the Spanish civil war.

Flood Costs $500,000.

MaAllen, Tex., Aug. 28 (AP).—Delayed dispatches from the storm-devastated Mexican coastal area in the lowlands west of Tampico said today Mexican authorities estimated flood damage at nearly $500,000. It was reported 5,000 persons had been marooned and hundreds were homeless. Troops were rushing food into the area.

Jewel Thievery And Odd Music Click at Earle

Screen and Stage Both in the Money as Osborne Music Slides Over.

"THE RETURN OF SOPHIE LANG." Paramount picturization of a story by Frederick Irving Anderson, adapted to the screen by Patterson McNutt and Irving Marlow, featuring Gertrude Michael, Sir Guy Standing and Ray Milland, with Elizabeth Patterson, Colin Tapley, Paul Harvey, Purnell Pratt, Gerry Owen, Don Rowan and Tom Oliver. Directed by George Archainbaud. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

Trust Will Osborne to pop up with a new angle on "swing." The "slide music" that Will is circulating at the Earle Theater this week belongs right in the top rhythm brackets.

"Slide music" is called that because it bears down on the slide trombones and the slide cornets and slides them together in one grand mess of steaming rhythm. Dick Douglas educates the audience in "slide" via the microphone while loose-jointed Director Osborne devotes himself to its illustration. It is rather acrobatic music, but you'll hardly be able to help liking it plenty, particularly in the "Darktown Strutters' Ball," which it glorifies in an expansive way.

But in playing "St. Louis Blues" in three-quarter time, Will Osborne really outdoes himself and most other directors, too. You've never really heard the great "St. Louis Blues" if you haven't heard it in this sleepy, puzzling tempo. It puts the melody in slow motion, takes it apart and then puts it together again in the husky blare of "slide."

Specialty Artists Score.

Dick Douglas, a little fellow with big ways, puts over the Osborne songs and we mean he really puts them over. But he hits his highest altitude in pure pantomime. His impression of a gal taking a bath could be bathed itself in spots—but why spoil good fun? Dorothy Douglas also sings very well in the straight manner.

Ruthie Barnes, billed as the "tops in taps," doesn't let down her billing by even a little bit. She does the most difficult steps with easy nonchalance and gets effectively comic just to show her versatility.

Bob Hall, the fellow who makes up verses faster than most of us can talk, had no end of fun with the audience yesterday and vice versa. Bob just picks on everybody, including The Post critic. If you come in or go out, if you scratch your nose or pull your ear, if you have blonde hair or none at all—Bob makes up a verse about it to the edification and glee of everyone who can see you. But he does it in just the right way, so that even the subjects of his extempore versifying enjoy it.

And on the Screen.

"The Return of Sophie Lang" falls into what may be termed the Oppenheim genre of pictures. It moves in a rarified stratosphere of international jewel thieves, millionaires and gems of fabulous value, with occasional swoops into the underworld and the police department.

Gertrude Michael, now established as a leading woman who always turns in a good performance, plays the legendary Sophie Lang, slickest girl jewel lifter who ever lived. Ray Milland, something of a newcomer, but handsome and promising, is the young newspaper man who substitutes love for jewels as Sophie's chief interest.

Sir Guy Standing, polished and suave, is the beau ideal of what an international jewel thief ought to be, supposing that he really gets away with a million-dollar diamond.

A Veteran Triumphs.

But to that charming elderly actress, Elizabeth Patterson, must go honors equal to any other of the principals. As a sharp-tongued old millionairess, with the greatest collection of gems in the world, she more than holds her own in all sequences—in fact she steals large slices of the show.

"Echo Mountain," an effective musical in color, goes in for Alpine scenery and also features a huge St. Bernard and his kitten friend. Also good is a sports short with "Lucky" Teter, automobile stunt driver, who assuredly needs an over supply of luck considering the way he skids cars around on their ears. The newsreel shows Gov. Landon raising loads of applause from his home folks, said applause being echoed a bit half-heartedly by the Earle audience.

RKO-Keith's

"WALKING ON AIR." RKO-Radio's picturization of the story, "Count Pete," by Frances Cockrell, featuring Ann Sothern and Gene Raymond, supported by Jessie Ralph, Henry Stephenson and Gordon Jones. Directed by Joseph Santley. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

As a minor effort between two major hits (Scots' Mary, now departed, and "Swing Time," soon to come), this mild little picture lives up to the lightweight quality of its title.

It is a silly and unimportant affair, but Gene Raymond, Ann Sothern, Jessie Ralph and Henry Stephenson are pleasant people, and the fable has its gay moments and a fast, furious and funny ending.

Ann, it seems, is the stubborn daughter of a stubborn father. Daughter says she is going to marry one Fred Randolph. Father says she isn't. So daughter goes out and hires herself a man who is even more objectionable than Fred, the idea obviously being that the contrast will make father love Freddie. The idea doesn't work, since Gene is the hired man.

So They Sing:

The saddest and most surprising thing about it all is that Ann (once) and Gene (several times) try to sing and they just don't seem to be singers. Miss Jeannette MacDonald has a lot of teaching to do to Fiance Gene before they can render delightful domestic duets. The songs themselves are rather catchy—in orchestral versions.

Aside from their vocal moments, Ann and Gene are attractive; Ann sufficiently wilful, and Gene having a good time with insults and a very phony accent. Henry Stephenson and Jessie Ralph cotribute their usual excellence as Ann's father and aunt, respectively.

Aside from these principals, Gordon Jones, the young man who manages to look stupid and nice at the same time, gives a good account of himself in a body-guard bit.

The too, too many subsidaries include an amusing and good color cartoon, an interesting "Stranger Than Fiction" short reel, an extremely amaturish Amateur Hour feature and the Pathe newsreel.

The Gorgeous Hussy

A Cinema Serialization of the Life Story of Lovely Peggy O'Neale —Daughter of an Innkeeper, Confidante of a President.

What Has Happened So Far.

Peggy O'Neale is not sure whether Senator John Randolph is in love with her, and accepts the proposal of Bow Timberlake, young naval officer. The marriage ends in tragedy soon afterward when Bow is killed in government service. Peggy tries to forget everything by working zealously to aid the Presidential aspirations of her friend, Andrew Jackson.

CHAPTER FIVE.

It was a gala day at the National Race Course, in the outskirts of Washington, a perfect early autumn afternoon in 1828. Three national celebrities, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay and Andrew Jackson had entered horses in the final event of the meet, the Capitol Trotting Stakes. Particular interest was centered on this race by reason of the fact that Gen. Jackson, whose Presidential candidacy would soon be determined at the polls, was present in person.

His horse, which for sentimental reasons he had named Peggy O'Neale, was a distinct long shot. Odds of thirty to one were being freely offered, with few takers.

Peggy herself, matured from girlhood into enchanting womanhood, sat in a front box with Gen. and Mrs. Jackson, their niece, Emily Donelson, a pinch-faced, neurotic type, Senator John Eaton, and Anne Royall, publisher of an independent newspaper espousing the Jackson cause.

An adjacent box was manned with a battery of jealous, catlike eyes. A small group of self-appointed society arbiters were carving up Peggy and the Jacksons in venomous, low whispers. Mrs. Bomfret Beall, a fat, forbidding woman of 50, leaned forward to speak to Louisa Abbot, a relatively young but hopeless-looking spinster.

"My dear," she purred "haven't I always said she's the most dangerous woman in Washington?"

"Yes," agreed Louisa. "And widowhood is such a useful weapon."

"Birds of a feather," added Mrs. Beall, nodding toward Peggy and Rachel Jackson. "An innkeeper's daughter and a backwoods wife."

"Look!" look!" cried one of the other members of the group, as she saw Peggy handing her field glasses to Senator Eaton. "The hussy! Practicing her wiles on that charming Mr. Eaton!"

As the horses were brought out by their handlers, prior to the running of the main event, Gen. Jackson rose.

"Like to go down and put a little bet on your namesake for good luck?" he asked Peggy. She smilingly assented.

As Jackson was placing the wager Peggy noticed a tall, familiar figure standing beside the rail. She gave a start, hesitated a moment, then stepped forward.

"John!" she called out lightly.

Senator Randolph turned, caught sight of her, anad held out his hand in greeting, a curiously non-committal expression on his face.

"It's been a long time since I've seen you," said Peggy.

"Yes," returned Randolph in a constrained manner. "I've taken a house near the Senate. I find it more convenient."

"Is that the reason?" asked Peggy. He did not reply, and she looked at him with intense earnestness. "John, what's happened to us? You've never come to the inn. After you sent me that little note—after Bow——"

Conflicting Invitations.

"Time passed very quickly for me," Randolph hastened to say. "I worked a great deal, and I was busy on my farm."

"'In case you haven't noticed," returned Peggy, a playful gleam coming into her eyes, "I've quite grown up."

"Margaret," replied Randolph, his voice changing, "I'm dining the new British Minister and his wife next Friday. Won't you please come?"

"I'd love it, John," said Peggy impulsively. Then a sudden recollection flashed into her mind, and her face fell. "I forgot. I promised Senator Eaton, just a little while ago, to dine with him on Friday. Couldn't you——"

But Randolph's habitually reserved expression had returned, and, besides, there was not time for further discussion. Jackson came up, and the two men disgressed into politics.

In a few minutes the race was on. Peggy O'Neale got a bad start and was trailing the field at the first lap. Then, while the crowd roared at such a spectacular demonstration, Jackson's entry pulled up into fourth, third, second place. It was neck and neck for the finish. The favorite had it. No, Peggy O'Neale, by an unbelievable spurt, plunged over the finish line a nose ahead!

The trainer brought forward a large floral wreath, and presented it to Mrs. Jackson, who declared that Peggy should have the honor of decorating the racer named after her.

"Come along then, darlin'," said Jackson, taking Peggy's arm.

"Did you hear that?" hissed Mrs. Beall, leaning forward breathlessly. "He called her 'darlin'.'"

Never had an election been marked by more bitterness and tensity of feeling. The contrast between the two nominees was so striking that one could not fail to take sides. John Quincy Adams, on the one hand, was a polished intellectual from Massachusetts. Andrew Jackson, although even his enemies granted he was a friend of the common people, was pictured as an illiterate upstart from South Carolina.

When the pinnacle of excitement had been reached and the voting had taken place, Peggy sat anxiously in her room at the Franklin Inn. Indecisive bulletins had been posted, but final word was expected very soon. Immersed in a reverie of mixed emotions, Peggy was startled when a servant brought word that Mrs. Bomfret Beall was waiting below. She was the last person from whom she would have expected a social call.

"Why, how do you do?" beamed Mrs. Beall. "You know, I've been saying to myself for a long time, 'I must drop in and pay my respects to that charming Mrs. Timberlake.'"

"It must have taken courage," said Peggy, "to jeopardize your reputation in this way."

"It is I who have always admired you," rejoined Mrs. Beall. "Yes, I might even say, defended you."

There was a wild shout outside, and Rowdy Dow, hair disheveled and coat torn open, burst into the room.

"God bless Andrew Jackson!" he cried out. "Seventh President of the United States of America!"

Peggy, her heart pounding with joy, rushed to throw her arms about the bringer of such good news. Then she turned just in time to catch Mrs. Beall's slyly appraising look.

"I suppose you had no idea of this," she exclaimed, "when you gushed in here like a tidal wave."

"What do you mean?" said Mrs. Beall.

"Just this," retorted Peggy. "The instant you knew, you almost broke your neck getting here so that you could cackle yourself into my esteem."

Mrs. Beall gasped for breath, her face livid with helpless rage.

"You pothouse hussy" she screamed, surging out of the room. "You'll live to regret this!"

Discordant Note.

The banquet in honor of Jackson's victory was held the next night at Franklin Inn. All those who were closest to "Old Hickory" had gathered to voice their happiness at his triumph. Across one wall was a huge American flag, bearing 24 stars. Peggy sat between Senator John Eaton and Martin Van Buren.

As Jackson rose at one end of the long dining table, a confused crescendo of voices came from outside. In a moment definite phrases were audible.

"Jackson! Murderer! Shot his own men at New Orleans! Who wants Jackson? We don't!"

The general shot a quick fiery glance toward the window, but for the moment refused to recognize the raucous demonstration below.

"My friends," he said, to those gathered around the table, "I earnestly hope that if there are some o' you that don't entirely approve the way I do things, that none o' you may have reason to disapprove o' the final results. Mabe my manner is rough, but my heart is warmed by the constant desire to insure the happiness o' the people o' this country——"

"Ol' Hickory Sournut! Ol' Pizen-Oak! He don't dare to show his face! Hangman! Murderer!" The crowd was getting noisier.

Jackson stepped to the balcony, and a derisive clamor resounded across the court.

"Gentlemen," said the general, raising his hand. "Whatever I have done in the past, I have done because I considered it just an' right. I shall continue to do so for the rest o' my livin' days."

There was a moment's silence, then a heckler's shrill voice came from the semi-darkness.

"How's your wife fixed for pipe tobacco, hangman? Kin she spare some?"

This was the type of insult that no man could ignore. Without a word the President-elect swung over the balcony and into the crowd below, as a wild yell greeted his act.

"Quick!" cried Peggy, turning in frantic haste to the men beside her. "He'll be killed!"

Checking Out!

It won't be long now . . . The bags are nearly all packed, and it won't be until we're on the boat that we'll discover we packed the vest of a suit and left the coat and trousers . . . Or that we carefully packed some razor blades and left the soap, brush and razor in the medicine chest . . . The absent-minded professor had nothing on me when it comes to plain and fancy packing . . . But just as long as we have the tickets and the money orders, everything is okay . . . Oh yes, the passport . . . Where is the passport? It's about this big, it has a brown cover—I left it on the dresser . . . What? In my inside pocket? . . . To be sure, to be sure . . . Funny how it got there . . . Would have sworn it was on the dresser . . . All right, all right . . . Don't get excited . . . Take it easy.

GINGER ROGERS.

• • • •

Here's the cab, and we've got plenty of time to get to the pier . . . Uh-huh, the French Line pier, driver, and drive carefully . . . Wait a moment! Wait a moment! Drive back to the house, my good man . . . I forgot my wife.

• • • •

The last recollections of New York that will be carried aboard are exciting . . . There is, for instance, the memory of the Harvest Moon ball, with some 22,000 faces as whitecaps of an ocean that stirred and writhed in a fury of sound and motion . . . There is the memory of the introductions of Jack Dempsey, Ginger Rogers, Mayor LaGuardia, Bill Robinson, Lou Gehrig, the Ritz Brothers, Rudy Vallee, Jack Pearl, Jerry Adler . . . And at each introduction, that vast ocean roared and thundered . . . I thought that the introduction of Ginger Rogers would end disastrously, and standing there, with the most incredible noise filling the air, I envied the nonchalance of the late Joe Humphries handling a riotous fight crowd . . . So thinking of it, I said to them: "I'm no Joe Humphries," and the crowd quieted down . . . Even the name of the famous veteran worked magic, just as they used to say that Christy Mathewson only had to throw his glove out on a pitching mound to win a ball game.

• • • •

In vaudeville, in the big houses, you play to an audience of 5,500 or 6,000 people at a single show . . . But at Madison Square Garden, where there are 22,000 people or more at the Harvest Moon ball, the explosion of applause is so violent that it reaches the ring in great waves of sound . . . The sensation is difficult to describe, but it is as if hundreds of big guns were exploding within arm's length . . . The Ginger Rogers' applause undoubtedly hit a new all-time high in sharpness, intensity and volume . . . Ginger told Mayor LaGuardia that it was the greatest thrill she'd ever had, and you can believe it.

• • • •

In the three weeks I'll be gone, the Managing Ed has asked me to send back three or four columns on the Broadways of Europe . . . The first one will be a column on the boat trip . . . The second will be one on London, the third on Ireland, the fourth on Paris . . . That is the pleasantest assignment I've ever had, and I am hopeful that he will not notify me that he would like an intimate story on Madrid . . . I don't want any part of those old Spanish customs . . . They're fit neither for man nor beast, as W. C. Fields would say.

• • • •

But now the boat is getting up steam, and long streamers of black smoke are ribboning out of the funnel . . . "All ashore who's going ashore" . . . This is the first time I've ever heard that warning signal and not had to obey it . . . Go on, Frenchies, yell all you want this time . . . I'm staying right on the boat . . . Good-by, good-by, good-b-by-by!

WPA Overtime.

The question of whether or not WPA employes are to receive additional leave for accrued overtime apparently is still to be settled despite the supposed "agreement" arrived at Wednesday between lodge representatives and Assistant Administrator Corrington Gill.

In an order issued yesterday by Chief Clerk Harry L. Kinnear provision was made for compensating employes required to work overtime with additional leave to be taken within two weeks of the time worked. No mention, however, was made of whether such compensatory leave would be granted for overtime accrued in the past.

Gill was out of town and none of his assistants seemed able to state definitely whether the question had been decided one way or the other. Our guess—and it's no more than a guess—of how the situation lines up is that WPA officials are still a little undecided on how much of the accrued overtime should be recognized. Perhaps they are hoping to compensate back-overtime only up to a certain date, let us say a month or two.

The order which has been approved by both Gill and Deputy Administrator Aubrey Williams, and has been sent to all division chiefs follows:

"Effective this date no employe shall work overtime.

"Exception may be made in actual emergencies but such overtime shall be reported to the chief clerk within 24 hours, together with an explanation of the necessity.

"Compensated emergency overtime for employes earning $2,600 per annum or less will be allowable provided such overtime leave is taken within two weeks.

"Division chiefs disapproving requests for annual leave or overtime must state their reasons for disapproving such leave on the reverse of the application and forward to the chief clerk's office immediately.

"Failure to comply with this order shall be considered cause for disciplinary action."

Counting Fish.

Glen Leach, in charge of the fish culture section of the Bureau of Fisheries, reports that the Bureau hatched out 1,000,000,000 more fish last year than ever before. The grand total was 8,170,000,000 to 5,071,000,000 for the year before.

In case you're bothered, as we were, about how the fish are counted, it's done by weighing off an ounce of fish eggs, counting how many there are to the ounce and using that as a yardstick for the entire hatch. When the eggs die they are taken out of the hatch, and weighed. By subtracting the two weights the number hatched is obtained. Leach admits that the result may be off by hundreds or thousands but he isn't worried. He's sure no one will ever be able to prove him wrong.

John McCallum, of the Federal Housing Administration, has been named a senior member of the Society of Residential Appraisers, national organization devoted to development of sound appraisal methods.

The deadline date for applications for various grades of public health nursing consultants has been extended to September 14. Salaries range from $2,000 to $4,000 a year.

Leave.

One of our readers has written in asking us to explain the apparent inconsistency in two leave decisions of the Comptroller General's office—that of July 27 telling the National Relations Board that any person transferring to the board, who had accumulated leave in his previous position, is entitled to that leave, and the second, on August 1, telling the Government Printing Office that it did not have to recognize such "transfer" leave.

We took up the matter informally with one of the leading personnel problem lawyers in the Government service and this was his explantation: Before the President issued his uniform leave regulations, the various departments issued temporary leave regulations. In those temporary leave regulations the N. L. R. B. recognized leave accumulated in other agencies by transferred employes, but the G. P. O. did not. When the President issued his regulations, all temporary regulations of the various agencies were ratified and then superseded by the uniform ruling recognizing such leave after July 1.

The fault, if anywhere, would seem to lie with the G. P. O. for not being liberal enough in anticipating the President's leave rulings.

Park Service Birthday.

The National Park Service is celebrating its twentieth birthday this week. In 1916 when the service was set up there were only 16 employes in Washington; today, with temporary workers included, there are more than 4,500.

Most of the increase came with the transfer of the Public Buildings and Parks and Capital Parks work to the Park Service in 1933. Actually the administrative staff in this city that is co-ordinating the Park Service activities throughout the country number only 71.

A. E. Demaray, acting director of the Park Service, points out that in 1916 the service took care of 16 national parks and 21 national monuments, 11 national military parks, 10 battlefield sites, 4 miscellaneous memorials, 11 national cemeteries and 3 parkways, totaling 15,596,807 acres. All of which goes to show how park and monument conscious we have grown in the last two decades.

Worse Than Worthless.

In submitting requests for increased appropriations the director of the District's playgrounds sharply criticizes the work done for that department by the WPA and its National Youth Administration adjunct. Miss Baker asserts that the programs of these emergency agencies are "inevitably uncertain, the work poor in quality, the workers unable to carry full responsibility." Moreover she charges that work-relief activities make such heavy demands upon the department's supervisory staff that "at times all their energy seems to be deflected from the regular program to solve the problems of the WPA workers."

Similar objections were expressed a few days ago by the Board of Library Trustees in presenting their demands for increased budgetary appropriations. They, too, stressed the general inadequacy of the assistance rendered by WPA and NYA workers, pointing out that they are "not trained for public service and are not allowed to be used for work regularly performed; also they require much time-consuming supervision." This indictment is not measurably softened by the admission that the relief workers have been "reasonably helpful in building maintenance and some special binding work that could not otherwise be attempted."

Testimony of this sort, coming from District officials who have first-hand knowledge of the conditions of which they speak, cannot be dismissed as the invention of political enemies of the Administration. It adds to the appalling mass of evidence depicting the essential wastefulness of the work-relief policies of Harry Hopkins. Possibly both the libraries and the playgrounds of the District have benefited to some extent from the activities of WPA and NYA workers. But such gains are plainly out of all proportion to the direct and indirect costs incurred.

There is no remedy for this pitiful situation so long as the Hopkins policy of using relief funds to create a maximum number of direct jobs is followed. The sensible and economical alternative is to limit work-relief jobs to undertakings of a useful character, providing direct benefits for all the unemployed for whom socially desirable employment suited to their abilities cannot be found.

Chiang Kai-shek On Top.

A few months ago the Chinese government was faced by so formidable a combination of difficulties that its collapse seemed imminent.

In the west and northwest it had to contend with a Communist movement which Chiang Kai-shek had for years sought vainly to root out. In the north, Japanese military leaders were openly plotting the separation of Hopei, Chahar, Suiyan, Shansi and Shantung provinces and their combination into an autonomous regime dominated by the island empire. Moreover, with Japan's connivance, eastern Hopei was being used as the base for vast smuggling operations that deprived Nanking of indispensable revenues.

To cap the climax, the Southwestern Political Council, representing the powerful war lords of Kwantung and Kwangsi provinces, chose this moment to go on the war-path against Nanking, although disguising this move as a crusade directed against Japan.

Yet now Chiang Kai-shek is not only more firmly in the saddle than ever, but, for the first time in years, Nanking's authority now extends firmly over Canton. With a skill that explains why he has managed to remain in power longer than any other ruler in the history of the Chinese republic, Chiang has managed to extricate himself from his difficulties.

While he temporized with the Japanese and ignored the Communist armies in the northwest, where they did not constitute a real threat to his regime, he threw all his resources into the struggle against the Southwestern Political Council. By buying off some of his opponents he smashed the anti-Nanking movement in the south. The Chen Chi-tang regime in Kwangtung collapsed. Nanking officials are now in power in Canton and are planning a drastic clean-up of the situation there.

The new commissioner of finance, T. L. Soong, has announced a sweeping program of financial reform which, if carried out, will not only improve Kwangtung's economic situation but will tighten the links binding it to the central government. And with Central and South China at last united Nanking is in a position to oppose the pressure from Japan with greater vigor than it has hitherto employed. For it is, at bottom, only China's weakness that makes possible Japan's aggression.

Driving Truth Home.

In promising, if elected, to repeal the levy upon corporate surpluses, Gov. Landon has taken a stand which will be approved and applauded by everyone who appreciates the strangling effect of this punitive tax measure upon the expansion of business enterprise. Indeed, the case for repeal rests upon such unassailable grounds as to be invulnerable to partisan rejoinder.

It is sometimes argued, however, that heavy taxes upon undistributed earnings might prevent an undue growth of corporate surpluses, thus encouraging an excessive expansion of plant and equipment, leading inevitably to the kind of economic collapse that overtook us in 1929. This is pure assumption, not borne out by the facts. Indeed, the Brookings Institution, in its study of "America's Capacity to Consume," states that "there is no evidence to show that corporate savings constituted any larger percentage of the national income in 1929 than they did 20 years earlier. While the data are not entirely conclusive, the available evidence points rather in the opposite direction. On the whole, we conclude that there has been no significant change in the trend of corporate savings."

Even if one were to accept the theory that overinvestment, with its counterpart of too little spending for consumption purposes, is responsible for recurrent business depressions, the remedy certainly does not lie in a tax law designed to force the distribution of corporate surpluses regardless of the nature of the business carried on by the taxed concern.

Under the legislation sponsored by the Administration, concerns representing growing industries that can profitably employ large amounts of new capital receive the same treatment as those attached to stationary or decadent industries. The reserves of stable business are taxed at the same rates as those showing great fluctuations in returns from year to year. In short, as a device for leveling the peaks and elevating the depressions of business cycles, the tax on corporate surpluses deserves Mr. Landon's definition as the "most cockeyed piece of legislation ever imposed in a modern country."

By forcing corporations to choose between paying excessively high taxes upon undistributed profits, above a given percentage, or disbursing such profits as dividends to shareholders, the Government has, as Mr. Landon states, tied a millstone around the neck of "the little fellow." At the same time the large concern with ample reserves is left free to follow the traditional American practice of plowing earnings back into the business. Thus this vaunted scheme for "soaking" rich and powerful corporate entities is in reality a program that prevents small businesses from becoming larger and helps to preserve the competitive advantage and foster the growth of the big ones.

Gov. Landon might also have pointed out that a system which penalizes the creation of ample working capital and surplus makes inevitable a return of banker control over industry, since corporate managements must apply to the banks for funds with which to finance modernization plans or expansion programs, in the absence of free funds of their own. If American industry is forced to follow the English practice of distributing earnings and relying upon the banks and the investment market to provide needed capital, we shall undoubtedly have to become reconciled to a slower pace of progress.

Obviously any sort of tax system that retards industrial development means a loss of potential jobs for working men. Furthermore, as Gov. Landon noted, corporate surpluses have been a major safeguard against bankruptcy in lean years. They have kept men employed by providing reserves out of which corporations have paid out in wages far more than they received in the form of current income. In addition to being a godsend to the working population of the country, these surpluses have also kept many people living off saved income from entering bread lines, and have helped to keep others employed by maintaining purchasing power at higher levels.

A tax that threatens to sweep away such a socially useful business stabilizer and aid to progress should unquestionably be repealed. However, Gov. Landon realizes that many other changes in our existing tax system are imperative. The whole structure, Federal and State, he affirms, needs overhauling. It is evident that the Governor's conception of overhauling is a type of reform based upon sound taxation principles, and upon a rational allocation of taxes between Federal and local governments. A well-balanced tax system calls for courage in placing the tax burden where it will yield maximum revenues with a minimum amount of disturbance to orderly business.

It is especially necessary that the people should be made to realize that whatever form taxes may take, they rest in final analysis upon the people. In driving home that truth, Gov. Landon has made a very important contribution to straight thinking on a subject about which the average man is painfully ignorant.

Drought And Weather Cycles.

A realistic approach to the drought problem is indicated by President Roosevelt's informal talk at Bismarck, as well as by the report of his Great Plains Drought Area Committee. With a belated note of regret for the AAA's contribution to this year's crop shortages, the President called for a "program of co-operation with nature instead of, as in the past, trying to buck nature."

The drought committee has suggested a course far removed from the fanciful human transplantation schemes so dear to the heart of Dr. Tugwell. "The fundamental purpose of any worth-while program," says the report, "must be not to depopulate the region but to make it permanently habitable." To that end the committee suggests comprehensive measures to arrest soil erosion and to make more efficient use of available water resources. Certain submarginal lands, the committee believes, should be taken out of cultivation through purchase by the Government. Other areas, it is suggested, could well be leased by the Government for conversion into forest areas or grasslands.

In some cases irrigation may be profitably applied, co-operative grazing associations may be developed and soil-conserving practices may be generally utilized. Along with these measures the committee suggests establishment of a board representing Federal and State agencies, to pursue further studies and co-ordinate the various remedial endeavors. No one is likely to take exception to this advice, although there is a divergence of opinion as to how much and what part of the prairie should be returned to grasslands.

Despite its practical suggestions, the committee could not resist the temptation to dramatize its findings. "We endanger our democracy," it concluded, "if we allow the great plains or any other section of the country to become an economic desert." But scientific research does not seem to support the belief that the plains will soon be turned into desert. Overgrazing and unwise cultivation have undoubtedly accentuated the disaster of recent droughts. Large amounts of fertile soil have been lost. But this region has marvelous recuperative powers in moist years. And there is every reason to believe that years of abundant rain will follow the present dry period.

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, of the Smithsonian Institution, has found, from an intensive study of records running back more than a century, that drought recurs in the North Central States in cycles of 23 years. This theory is now largely substantiated by the studies of Dr. Frederic E. Clements and Dr. Ralph W. Chaney, of the Carnegie Institution. Further study will be necessary before farmers can rely upon drought predictions. But it does appear that definite progress toward long-range weather forecasting is being made.

As the Carnegie Institution study points out: "In essence, man's struggle against nature is a contest with climate." Particularly is that so in the Middle West. No program of rehabilitation for the drought region is likely to be satisfactory unless it can in some way be linked to weather cycles. The "disastrous consequences" of drought, aided by artificial crop curtailment, have been amply pointed out by Drs. Chaney and Clements. A long-term drought program, adopted under the pressure of the existing emergency, might take a similar unfortunate turn a few years hence if cyclical variation in weather should be ignored.

Carelessly Guarded Secrets.

Were he alive today, Rear Admiral Moffett would doubtless have approved the Navy's action in demoting one of his sons. And it may be assumed that Lieut. W. A. Moffett will show the same Spartan spirit in accepting punishment for carelessly misplacing secret official documents. At the same time the incident provokes wonder that the Navy permits valuable papers to circulate so freely that they can be picked up—if such they were—from a parked automobile.

How many more Navy secrets are today in danger of similar easy discovery? Recent events suggest that there are, or at least have been, others. In particular, more light is now thrown on the question of how Farnsworth might have obtained a part of the information he is said to have passed on to the Japanese.

Whether or not this is a fair explanation, the Moffett incident by itself would seem to indicate that a tightening of the controls over valuable naval documents is strongly in order.

According to the Bureau of the Census, a baby is born in this country each 13 seconds. And in view of the urgent need for more taxpayers, they are arriving none too fast.

Not The Old Cossacks.

From the London Daily Telegraph.

The Kuban Cossacks, who declare themselves ready to slash heads with their sabers for the Soviet Union, are probably at best no more than a remnant of a once powerful people. With the Cossacks on the Don and Terek, the Kuban Cossacks were almost wiped out in the famine of 1932-33.

In Imperial Russia they were to a considerable extent self-governing, under their own tribal organizations. They fiercely resented collectivization by the Soviet. The result was that the famine was used as a weapon against them and other recalcitrant minorities. Their continued resistance made them a threat to the state's projects, for they occupied large tracts of land in southern Russia.

Praise For Pegler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Westbrook Pegler has come in for a round of abuse by his advocacy of drink in athletics. I do not believe that alcoholic drinking is good for anyone. But this lapse should not blind our eyes to what Westbrook Pegler does as the foe of sham and hypocrisy.

The letters from Europe showing up the utter destruction of liberty in Italy and Germany should have made the heart of every true American glow with pride and gratitude that he lives in a land where one can think out loud without being in danger of prison or death. Personally I am a better American for having read his letters.

Moreover, as a minister of the Gospel for more than 50 years, I am profoundly grateful to him for the exposure of those who use the term "reverend" for sinister and unworthy ends.

I could wish Mr. Pegler were less partisan in his zeal for Mr. Roosevelt. He hardly does justice to him, while he misses no opportunity to belittle the Republican candidate. But I am not perturbed. Now that Franklyn Waltman is back on the job, Pegler will have a sufficient antidote. Mr. Waltman discriminates. But I shall continue to read Mr. Pegler. Because he, like myself, is a foe to sham.

A Widow's Savings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I heartily indorse the splendid article signed J. E. H. on Government supervision of banks in The Post of August 26.

It is not pessimism, Mr. J. E. H., it is a tragedy. I never took my savings to the up-town branch of the Fidelity Building & Loan that I did not read again on the window and on the front door, "Under Treasury Supervision," and I said my savings will certainly be well guarded. I am a widow, and yet they took money from me up to nearly the hour of closing and I am sure every man in the office knew what was coming.

I'd much rather have been struck down by a bandit and robbed of every cent I have in the world than lose my faith in the Government. How am I to get along without my savings is my problem now, and, what redress have we? They even have our pass books. E. K.

Capitalism Or Socialism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of Mrs. C. Moore, bearing date of August 21, I read with some apprehension. She says, inter alia, "that the loyalists of Spain are the Reds and the rebels are merely the Spanish people rebelling at the tyranny imposed on them by their Red government."

I am worried by this statement. The Spanish fracas is but an overt manifestation of the struggle now confronting the entire world. Just as the agricultural system was superceded by the industrial system, so this latter must in turn give way to the next stage of economic evolution. It is not to be wondered at that Messrs. Ford, Hoover and Hearst oppose this metamorphosis. But why the masses of Americans, who possess nothing anyway manifest antagonism, is somewhat more than I can comprehend.

The question was settled in Russia in 1917. A few years later the hour struck in Germany and Italy for the coming of the new order, but the forces of reaction effected a temporary retrogression back to capitalism. Since the moribund system could no longer maintain itself, it must necessarily be preserved, if at all, by force. This we call fascism.

Forward with socialism, or backward with capitalism. That is the question. PLEBEIAN.

Airport Improvement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest the editorial appearing in The Post of August 26 entitled "Belated or Premature?"

The conclusion of the editorial, that the recently announced plan to improve the facilities of the Washington Airport by construction of runways, taxi strips and loading platforms "unfortunately lends itself to interpretation as a gesture to influence the (Airport) Commission's choice," is, in the light of the facts of the case, unfortunate.

The passage in March, 1936, by the Seventy-fourth Congress of Joint Resolution No. 488 granted permission to the "National Airport Corporation to use as a part of the runway of its airport located near the City of Washington, District of Columbia, such part of the road known as Military road as may be necessary to connect the two parts of the said airport by the said road." Inasmuch as the distance from the southern corner of Washington Airport to Military road is less than 1,700 feet, authorization by Congress to cross Military road with a runway was essential before plans could be made to build a runway the full length of Washington Airport and Hoover Field. Shortly after the passage of this resolution a study of the possibilities of constructing runways was begun, but was unfortunately postponed for several months by the floods which inundated the airport in March.

The growth of traffic on the airport, as well as the contemplated purchase by the air lines of larger equipment, has convinced the directors of National Airport Corporation that if the operation of the airport is to be continued, runway construction is essential in the interests of safety. President, National Airport Corporation.

Evolution Of Co-operatives.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The United Press dispatch in The Post on the Swedish co-operatives was very good. So have been previous articles on Scandinavian and British co-operatives. However, some of us would like to know more of the relation of the Socialist parties of these countries to the co-operative movement in general. It is the writer's understanding that the movement did not make its progress until after the Socialist parties became strong in the Scandinavian nations, including Finland.

In Britain, the Labor Party is the socialist organization there and has had tremendous influence in building the co-operative movement. In the United States, the growth of farmers and consumers co-operatives has been checked because we have had the bad habit of voting for the two old parties which have sabotaged the co-operative movement, since the big contributions for campaign funds come from individuals and organizations allied with monopolies. This is a bad habit we must change, if we want permanent progress in this country.

In Italy and Germany the labor organizations and the co-operatives were growing rapidly until the Fascist dictatorships came along, broke up the organizations by force and violence, and confiscated all the treasury funds built up by the people themselves. Yet these two nations have not solved any of their present problems, and can not. Bluff and braggadocio never solved anything. British conservative diplomacy has broken down completely and the English people realize their mistake in not electing the Labor Party to power two years ago. Their bungling of the Ethiopian situation and their general indecisiveness spells doom for the British Empire shortly.

Meanwhile, the Scandinavian nations have adopted evolutionary socialism, have no big war debts to pay, no big bureaucracy to support the capitalist class, socialize their monopolies and get along fine. Socialism pays big dividends, but it requires intelligent people who read and study all sides of a question. It also takes a free press, which the United States no longer has, except for the capitalist class

Objection To Landon.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We have just listened to the Republican candidate for President deliver his speech on taxation. The whole speech was so pitifully weak in its attempt to chastise the New Deal for trying to help bring the country out of a Republican-made depression that it was absurd.

The man gave no concrete answers to anything. He did not say how he would give work, food, clothing—even life—to the millions of unemployed and destitute farmers, workers, artists, etc., who are now being helped by New Deal methods. He only said that he did not believe in taxing the rich and promised to repeal the corporation surplus tax law if elected.

My husband and I have one real, heart-felt answer to this. The year that J. P. Morgan paid no income tax my husband, who was making but $3,200 a year, paid a very stiff one for people of our means. Nothing shows more clearly just whom the Republicans taxed when in power.

The Democrats, amid loud squeals from the rich, are trying to tax them, not the poor, but Landon objects. That is but one of the reasons why we object to Landon.

MARGUERITE EGLOFF.

Maryland Thankfulness.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As time marches on and mankind moves forward through his capacity to learn and create better modes of living, I sometimes wonder if his advancements along the lines of political science haven't fallen far short of his progress in the other sciences. As an illustration, one has only to look at Europe today.

In Italy and Germany we have witnessed the workings of Fascism. It is dictatorial in practice and even goes so far as to prevent free speech, free press and free assemblage.

In Russia, on the other hand, we have a promised Utopia through the principles and policies of socialistic philosophy. Here the old hereditary autocrats were thrown out, and aspiring and very intelligent members of the proletariat, virtually a clique, came into power. They set about to plan all parts of the national life, dictating as an oligarchy the policies and morals of the citizenry.

In Germany we have seen the persecution of certain races and the expulsion of these people from the territory therein. In Italy we have witnessed an aggressive military campaign, costing thousands of human lives, in order to divert, as many political observers believe, the attention of the people from domestic economic ills. In France we have seen economic and social disorders which might have threatened the very order of the government, and in Spain we have seen that order dissolved by a coup which might any day prove successful.

As I write this I am sitting on Prospect Hill, overlooking pacific and tranquil Frederick Valley. I see beautiful farms and contented citizens, rich, resourceful country just becoming revitalized from an economic disorder which was the inherent result of a past war. There is quite a contrast today between this Blue Ridge country and war-ridden Spain. Democracy has given us the former. Has Europe anything better to offer?

Vibratory Damages.

Post Office, Saturday.

Extracts from the notebook of a lecturer on the Development of Civil Law, in a D. C. university.)

A professional singer, a woman, brings suit against an ocean steamship company, asking compensation for damages which she alleges she received as a passenger aboard one of that company's vessels. Plaintiff charges that the vibration of the ship loosened a stone in her kidney, whereupon the liberated substance so abused its freedom as to prevent plaintiff from fulfilling her part of a concert contract, made before embarkation, which contract, if carried out, would have paid her the sum of $250 a week for a term of ten weeks.

Is a steamship company "negligent" if it permits one of its boats to vibrate? If so, at what degree of vibration does the negligence begin?

Is the owner of a passenger vessel obligated, by intent of common or admiralty law, to give public notice of such defects of that vessel as are capable of causing bodily injury or mental distress—over and above ordinary seasickness, which is admittedly exempt (Muskett vs. Pusey, Md., 1935 XC-23)—to a passenger thereon?

Among the ocean-traveling public, many ships acquire a reputation for undesirable eccentricities—as for pitching, rolling or vibrating. Since the boat owner is entitled to damages if he can establish that such report was untrue and caused him loss of custom, it would seem pertinent to inquire whether the dissemination of such information, even by inimical gossip, might not be construed as resulting in common knowledge or, indeed, warning by publication.

If the answer is affirmative, should an injured passenger be held chargeable with contributory negligence, and could a non-suit be properly granted?

Contributory negligence must combine "as a proximate and efficient cause with the negligence of the injurer": that is the definition under common law.

Would the preknowledge I have suggested amount to the required combination?

Or would it not?

Contributory negligence bars a plaintiff from recovery in common law, but in admiralty merely diminishes his recoverable damages. How is this distinction applicable to the singer, the kidney-stone and the vessel that vibrated?

What, also, are "precious stones?" We are all aware that stone-in-the-kidneys in expensive. But is it sufficiently so to be placed in the "precious" category? Where runs the monetary line separating semi-precious from precious stones?

The jewelry trade may have a rule.

The law, however, is silent.

Yet this is important. Under modern customs—regulations, a precious stone carried undeclared, and hidden, into nine countries out of ten would be subject to seizure; and the person concealing it, whether in his kidney or elsewhere, would be shorn of all rights to recovery for any damages occasioned by such clandestine portage.

In most States of our Union, statutes provide that persons intending to engage in a boxing contest shall, before entering the arena, be examined by a qualified physician and thereafter engage in their sport only at their own peril, unless the examiner shall have certified that their health is normal. Should a similar system be set up in regard to prospective ocean voyagers? If so, by the country wherein embarkation occurs, or by the country in which the steamship company is incorporated? Or—having a view to the fact that the damage is most likely to occur on the high seas—by international treaty? And who would be liable for the cost of the system's maintenance—the company or the candidates for passage?

Finally, in the event of an erroneous diagnosis, injurious by permitting the candidate to go to sea when physically unfit for sea travel, or injurious by compelling the candidate to remain at home when his financial well being or mental peace can be proved to depend upon the voyage, would an action for damages lie against the erring physician?

These are only a few of the delicate legal questions whereon it is impossible not to ponder when we begin the study of the ocean-crossing singer and the deep-sea-going stone.

Another question of considerable significance is that as to why—there being no scientific difference between the vibration of a ship and the vibration of a tuning-fork—the vibration of a ship should act upon the voice indirectly (to wit, through the kidneys) rather than directly, as by vibrating (or mis-vibrating) the vocal chords.

* * *

However, gentlemen, this last problem belongs to a type more likely to be solved by medicine than by law.

Mr. Bishop's Dilemma.

Do not scoff away with metallic laughter the problem of Julian T. Bishop, of Greenwich, Conn., a New York broker who advertised that in the event of Mr. Roosevelt's re-election he would sell his quail farm at Carthage, N. C., and move to Canada. David Croll, the minister of public welfare of the Province of Ontario, has written that Mr. Bishop might be unwelcome there, and a look at the globe will show that there is not much choice of territory left to a fugitive tax slave who requires asylum from the dues of American citizenship together with the freedom and opportunities which are available here.

In former times many American fugitives settled in England, having fled the United States to escape not the taxes, which were negligible before the World War, but the gross vulgarity of the sons and daughters of those whose labor and savings had made them rich.

A class of people but one generation removed from the red flannel undershirt and the red cloth on the kitchen table were beginning to smoke nickel cigars and equip their homes with gaslight. Their noisy ostentation and the periodic raids of the masses against private property in the labor wars of the '90s made the United States unbearable to persons of wealth and taste.

• • • •

They managed things much better in England, where the lower classes knew their place and kept it, and a clerk, whom the refugees by a firm effort of the will presently learned to call a "clark," was content to raise his family on 30 shillings a week and remain a clerk until he died. Taxes were low, wages negligible and one's social inferiors duly respectful.

These considerations and the lovely Old World atmosphere of the mother country, to say nothing of marrying off one's daughters to persons who really mattered, made England a delightful refuge.

France, too, was attractive then to a great many Astors, Vanderbilts and Goulds and their in-laws and second-string kin, who spent the years abroad, aloof from the noisy "bellering" and the occasional stampedes of those who toiled back home to provide the purchase price of dukes and counts.

But the war changed all that. The cost of the war was such that taxes became really excessive in England, and the social stir resulting from the war churned up from the bottom of the human pool all manner of dreadful creatures, really no better than the working classes at home. France remained charming, with the franc at 3 cents. But when the perfidious Roosevelt cut one's dollar almost in half by his iniquitous inflation the cost of the franc was doubled and with it the cost of living.

The inflation of the franc, reducing it to 3 cents, American, had been a totally different matter. That was a French measure, and one doesn't criticize the government of a country in which one is a guest. The French inflation enabled one to donate the resounding sum of 5,000 francs to a French charity and acquire the little red ribbon of the Legion of Honor as an ami de France for the trifling matter of $150. There was much to be said for French inflation.

• • • •

Now, however, in addition to the dishonest, confiscatory inflation of the dollar by Mr. Roosevelt, one living in France is harassed by excessive taxes and many petty exactions which amount to a robust whole. So France is really no refuge any more, in addition to all of which the rabble may get out of hand any moment.

So one in the unhappy situation of Mr. Bishop must cross off England and, while he is at it, Russia, Austria, Spain and the other charming bleachers from which to view the passing scene.

Italy remains to be considered, but one discovers irritations there easily comparable to those at home under Mr. Roosevelt at his worst. Italy has taxes which Roosevelt has not yet imagined, and an American resident is firmly deterred from engaging in profitable occupations in competition with home talent. Mr. Bishop is a broker who might want to turn over a dollar now and again if only for practice. He is, moreover, a man who likes to speak his mind, and that would never do in Italy.

• • • •

In Germany his situation would be similar, but more so, and, of course, he wouldn't want to go to South America—countries where in one period last year five revolutions were running, most of them concurrently, and most of the continent is governed by military dictators and feudalism.

Hawaii won't let Doris Duke build a private beach to the exclusion of the rabble, and Mrs. Bishop probably would find objections to Australia and Africa, where taxes are by no means undiscoverable. The Australians might even object to him.

I do not jest at Mr. Bishop's dilemma. I just wonder where a fugitive can go find nice taxes and the freedom which Roosevelt still permits us. The world is narrowing down, and I seriously doubt that he will find anywhere on earth a better 'ole than his quail farm at Carthage, N. C.

Seattle Paper Rejects Guild Parley Proposal

Seattle, Aug. 28 (AP).—The Seattle Post-Intelligencer, through W. V. Tanner, resident publisher, flatly rejected a "truce meeting" offer today by the American Newspaper Guild to end a 15-day-old strike, called by the guild after the discharge of two employes.

Cult of Militarism

Hitler, Finding German Love Of Army Effective Political Propaganda, Converts It Into New Nazi Religion.

Dr. Ewart Edmund Turner, former pastor of the American Church in Berlin, and now of Washington, has just returned from a tour of investigation throughout the Third Reich. He interviewed numerous Protestant and Catholic church officials and Jewish leaders, and presents his conclusions in a series of four articles, of which this is the last.

By Dr. Ewart Edmund Turner.

NATIONAL SOCIALISTS are no longer trying to conceal the fact that they are determined to build a new religion in the place of German Christianity. The group within the Nazi Party now possessing the upper hand think of Hitler as Germany's savior, not Christ; they look upon Hitler's "mein kampf" as authoritative, not the Bible; the party, not the church, is God's medium of salvation; zoology for them replaces theology, service to one's racial kin replaces the Christian doctrines of universal love and mercy.

During the first two years of Hitler's regime the majority of earnest Christians continued to believe that National Socialism would protect and foster historic Christianity. Today, however, 75 per cent of the Christian clergy and a majority of the serious laymen have come to look on National Socialism as a deadly period to organized Christianity. Only the nearness of Soviet Russia and their fear fo communism keep Christians in Germany from an open break with Hitler and his movement.

One Prussian pastor reminded this writer of the story of the camel that only wanted to warm his nose in the tent, but ended up by forcing in his whole body so that no room was left in the tent for the owner. Under the banner of "positive Christianity" the National Socialists won over the support of Catholics and Protestants in Germany. Once in, they have proceeded to define the party as the representative of positive Christianity, and the church is now defined by radical party orators as "negative Christianity."

An official pronouncement of the Eleventh Brigade of the Storm Troopers declares, "the negative Christian fights for the church to the detriment of the people; he fights for the church's doctrines and in support of the lies of the priests, and thus for the devil . . . To be an S. A. man and to belong to the confessional front of those who profess such a faith is absolute contradiction."

The chief attraction Hitler had and has for the German people can best be described by the word militarism. Ever since Frederick the Great, the German people have been trying to overcome their bitter sectionalism and achieve the status of a modern national state. Militarism has played an important role in the unification of nations, even America had two major wars in the process. But the mystical nature of the Germans plus their long tradition of autocracy has elevated militarism almost to the cult of a national religion. Only in Japan is there a psychological parallel today.

Militarism Solidifies Opinion Behind Fuehrer.

HITLER, with his genius for sensing what influences the German mentality, now finds in the cult of militarism the most effective political propaganda to solidify public opinion behind his party. In all parts of Germany this summer I have asked this question: "What do you think of Hitler?" Whatever else came back in the reply, friends and enemies alike included this comment, "at least the Fuehrer has restored German honor and security by rearming Germany and abolishing the demilitarized zone in the Rhineland."

Even foreign observers no longer predict that the army is going to intervene and save Germany from Hitlerism. "Hitler has given us more in 3 years than the Republic could have secured from the Allies in 30 years," was the comment one officer made to me. The officers of the German army are for the most part gentlemen; they disagree sharply with the anti-Semitism, racial idolatry, and pagan tendencies of many National Socialists. But the reply of one officer whom I have known for a number of years is typical: "We believe that a rearmed Germany is the only guarantee of peace within and without Germany. The army today probably has less trouble getting what it wants from the government than at any time in German history." This officer, as so many other Germans, dismisses the "excesses" of the party as transitional happenings of a revolutionary period which will shortly moderate.

Big business likewise has no interest in seeing Hitler pass. Industrialists helped finance him to power not so much to break the trade unions as to stem the rising Communist tide. The writer lived in Berlin at a time when the Communists comprised that city's largest political party. Just before Hitler came to power the Communists had 100 representatives in the Reichstag. The Industrialists are the backbone of German nationalism; some of them are also making pretty profits from rearmament. Then, too, there are no more strikes in Germany to sap earnings.

Even Christian Church Not Opposing Movement.

EVEN THE Christian church is not questioning the militarism which is again dominating the German national horizon. One writer of the Protestant oppositional church declares that with the return of the army the "last vestige of liberalism is removed from Germany." The liberalistic view of the army, this writer explains, sees the military establishment as a human product, whereas in truth military functions of the state are an ordinance of God.

No less a religious figure than Karl Heim, Germany's leading theologian, sets down in his most recent book the thesis that the army is one of the divine ordinances. A very powerful younger group in the German church sense the danger of the rising militaristic frankenstein monster, but their influence is feeble wherever found in Europe due to the presence of tensions which yesterday were Ethiopia and today are Spain.

The cult of militarism is rapidly emerging as the new world paganism. Because of the prohibition by the Versailles Treaty of military equality in Germany, the Germans welcome the restoration of their army with understandable emotion. This must not be forgotten if one tries to measure the power of the pagan forces which are pitted against Christianity in Europe today. Paganism has now reinforced itself with all the logic and appeal of the cult of militarism. Christians, by compromising with militarism, as millions of Italians did when Mussolini sacked Ethiopia, are cutting their own foundations out from under themselves.

Christianity Opposed By Militant Paganism.

ONE YEAR AGO in Tubingen I interviewed the leader of the German pagan movement, Prof. Wilhelm Hauer. He represented a united front of some 20 sects who were seeking a new Germanic religion. I asked him if his movement intended to build houses of worship. "No," he replied with a smile, "in a few years we will have plenty of empty Christian churches placed at our disposal."

In an article which I wrote for the press last year I described this statement of Hauer's as whistling in the dark. The fight is clearly one between National Socialism as a substitute religion and the historic Christian church. Commenting on Hauer's statement I wrote that the logic of events would undermine all such pagan sects as well as the extreme German Christians who are seeking to National-Socialize Christianity. Six months after I wrote these words Hauer voluntarily announced the dissolution of the pagan front. The movement of the German Christians to nationalize Christianity has also fallen on evil days.

The decision now rests with Hitler. In spite of all that he has done to alienate Christians and Jews they might still support him, if he would let them—because they are so German. To receive this support, however, he must limit his movement to the sphere of economics and politics. This seems an impossible thing to demand or expect, since all national Socialists boast that theirs is a philosophical movement. For this reason Jews are now resigned to the return of the German ghetto and Christians are becoming resigned to the prospects of martyrdom.

The End.

They occupied the underground galleries and refused to work while pickets guarded the mine entrance.

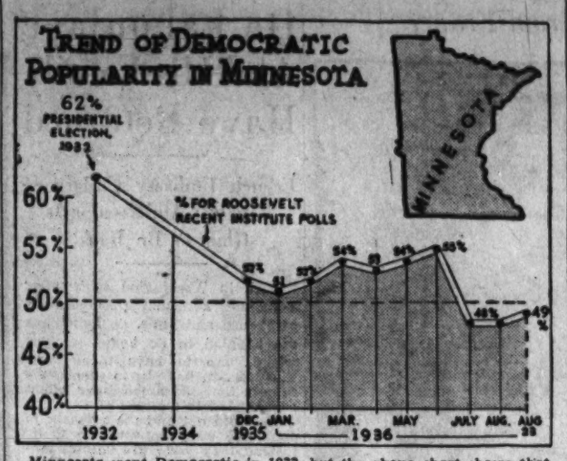
"Finished or not finished, I got a contract to start work August 29th!"



Minnesota went Democratic in 1932, but the above chart shows that it is Republican today by a small margin. Note the drop in Democratic strength which occurred directly after Landon was nominated in June. The percentages, which show the major party vote for Roosevelt, are based on returns from Institute of Public Opinion polls.

Death of Olson A Large Factor In Minnesota

Public Opinion Institute Poll in Post Sept. 6 to Show Its Effect.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 28.—The death of Gov. Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota, who was instrumental in carrying the State for a Democratic President in 1932 for the first time in history, came when President Roosevelt most needed his support, according to results of the Institute of Public Opinion's latest poll.

The poll shows Minnesota back in its traditional role as a Republican commonwealth at the moment, giving Landon 51 per cent of the major party vote and Roosevelt 49 per cent. From the present evidence it appears that the Democrats will need every ounce of support they can get to repeat in Minnesota the victory fo 1932.

The race is so close that Olson's death may prove to be a deciding factor.

Politicians have already begun speculating, however, as to how many of Gov. Olson's followers will drift into the Lemke camp. The poll shows that Minnesota is already Lemke's second strongest State, and that his vote there is on the rise.

How much the Democrats need fear this rise is open to question, however, because the poll shows that Lemke's gains were made not primarily at the expense of Roosevelt, but of Landon.

	Aug. 9 Poll.	Aug. 23 Poll.	Pts. Change.
Roosevelt	42.9%	42.0%	—.9
Landon	46.1	42.8	—3.3
Lemke	7.5	12.8	+5.3
Thomas	1.9	2.0	+.1
Others	1.6	.4	—1.2

Of course, the above figures only show the situation prior to Olson's death. The Institute's next poll, to be published in The Post September 6, will show to what extent this has happened.

Note—The percentages above are based on the vote for all parties. The figures given in the chart are for the major party vote taken as 100 per cent.

Cromwells Will Build Banned Pool in Florida

Honolulu, Aug. 28 (AP).—A representative said today Mrs. Doris Duke Cromwell, tobacco heiress, refused official permission to build a sea wall and pool on a homesite here, had decided to erect a home in Palm Beach, Fla., instead of here.

Mrs. Cromwell's representative, William Cross, jr., said 144 cases of Delhi marble from India will be reshipped to Palm Beach.

"Uncommon Knowledge"

By William Lyon Phelps.

Why, When And How.

"Uncommon Knowledge" is the alluring title of a new book of 368 pages, written by George W. Stimpson, and published by the Bobbs Merrill Co., Indianapolis.

George Stimpson is now president of the National Press Club; he is a newspaper man of experience, ability, and reputation. As his previous books show, "Popular Questions Answered," "Things Worth Knowing," he is fond of looking up and settling things that are constantly discussed, to which authoritative answers are not easy to obtain.

• • • •

Questions on history, politics, religion, science, superstition, etymology and slang, are some of the subjects on which the author gives us much needed information.

But this volume is not merely a reference book, to be used only when one wishes to seek definite information on some theme, like a dictionary or encyclopedia. It is dangerous to open it at random, for the opener suddenly sees something interesting and goes on reading, oblivious of time and engagements.

• • • •

Suppose I try this now. I give you my word I will open this book entirely at random, five times in succession; let us see what we find. First: Do fish shed their skins? What are frozen assets? Why is mint sauce eaten with lamb? Second: What does the Prince of Wales' motto "Ich dien" mean? To what extent did the Indians use copper? Third: Does the mocking bird sing at night? Was it St. Elmo's fire? Fourth: Why are former soldiers called buddies? How did "Hoodlum" originate? What is the difference between an heir apparent and an heir presumptive? Fifth: What per cent of American rivers flow South? How many States are named after Presidents? Who was Edith Cavell?

All of these questions are answered in detail. By the way, how do you pronounce Illinois?

Secretary Dern Funeral Service In D. C. Today

Cabinet Heads Will Take Body to Utah; Roosevelt to Attend Burial.

The Nation's Capital today will pay last honors to Secretary of War George Henry Dern at funeral services which are expected to be the most impressive witnessed here in months.

While flags atop all Federal buildings in the Nation and all Army posts stood at half-staff yesterday, arrangements for today's rites were completed by the White House and War Department.

Services will be held at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, 1410 Columbia road northwest, commencing at 4 p. m. The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor, will officiate. A guard of honor consisting of an Infantry company and the Army Band will be stationed at the church.

Aboard the special funeral train when it leaves Union Station immediately after church rites, bound for Salt Lake City, Utah, will be the following Cabinet members and other ranking officials:

To Attend Burial.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, Acting Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, Acting Secretary of the Navy William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady and Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull will not accompany the party, due to a specific request by President Roosevelt that he remain in Washington as acting head of the Government. The President will interrupt his present drought-inspection tour to attend funeral services Tuesday in Salt Lake City, where Dern served two terms as Governor.

Four military scout cars will precede the procession from Mount Pleasant Congregational Church to Union Station this afternoon. At the terminal to render honors will be a composite brigade consisting of the following units:

One battalion of the Thirty-fourth Infantry from Fort George G. Meade, Md.; one battalion of the Fifth Engineers from Fort Belvoir, Va.; the Second Squadron, Third Cavalry, and the First Battalion, Sixteenth Field Artillery, from Fort Myer, Va. Brig. Gen. Charles D. Roberts will be in command.

The funeral train will be routed from Washington to Chicago over the Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago to Omaha via the Chicago & Northwestern and Omaha to Salt Lake City via the Union Pacific.

Lies in State.

The body of Dern, who died here Thursday of a complication of diseases which developed from influenza, lay in state yesterday in the Walter Reed Hospital Chapel. Departmental heads and Gen. Craig will act as honorary pallbearers when the casket is transferred today from the chapel to the neighborhood church where the Secretary worshiped.

Scores of condolences poured in yesterday upon Mrs. Dern, the War Department and the White House. From Manila, Philippine Islands, came messages expressing the sympathy of Manul Quezon, President of the Philippine Commonwealth, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former chief of staff under Dern.

The train of mourning is scheduled to arrive at Salt Lake City early Tuesday morning. The body will lie in state at the capitol until 3 p. m., when services will be held in the Mormon Tabernacle. Military and Masonic rites will be accorded at the burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Speculation as to the choice for the Cabinet vacancy continued yesterday. Two well known American political figures gave cryptic replies when asked to comment on their availability.

Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Mayor of New York, said:

"I have a contract with the people of the City of New York until December, 1937, subject to renewal, optional with both sides."

Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana would volunteer only that he intends to complete his term of office which ends in January.

Actress From Britain Is Ordered Deported

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—Rudolph Reimer, commissioner of immigration, ordered the deportation today of Vera Hurst, an English actress, on the score she had been in this country illegally. The 47-year-old actress had been in several Broadway shows.

Reimer said that Actors Equity, the British consul and numerous organizations had interceded for her, but that nothing could be done because she had been in the country illegally for six years. She entered with a theatrical troupe from Canada in 1928 on a 12-month visit. She was detained and taken to Ellis Island last August 17. The Stage Relief Fund paid for her passage on the Laconia, which left for England late today.

Toys of War

Observer At Fort Knox War Games Ponders Zweig's Reaction To Scenes Of Mock Slaughter In Kentucky.

By Theodore Hall.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

NO AMERICAN of my age, in that late war which, if you will kindly recall, was to make the world safe for democracy, ever set two astounded eyes on naked battle. Just on the brink of the 'teens, we were all safe and snug at home; our sole predicament the necessity of putting one spoonful of sugar on our corn flakes instead of two, our only bellicose activity to buy War Saving Stamps, save peach pits and orate squeakily as junior four-minute speakers.

True, the daily casualty list on page 2 of the Star-Beacon, and a gold star down the street in the Widow Parson's window, seemed to indicate something. We weren't quite sure what that was, though. To us the war was simply very exciting, like a football season two years long. We fel tthat battle must be great sport, indeed.

And so, this morning, I found it. My typewriter, as I write this, sits on a wooden table in a square officer's tent in the Special Troops Area at Fort Knox, Ky. An M. P. with .45 on his hip saunters on sentry duty by the door flap, a regimental band tootles sweetly for guard mount in the next area, low-wing attack planes of the latest and most lethal type roar around over the trees, there is artillery fire off to the east on the left flank of the "Blue" divisions. Surging about me, over 150 square miles of Kentucky red dirt, are some 21,000 troops engaged in the maneuvers of the Second Army of the United States. It is battle as real as can be made with blank charges, lime-water compound for poison gas, and with bayonets left at home.

And assuredly it is great sport, heady, exciting, active, sweating, surprising, altogether enthralling. Opposed to the "Blue" forces as the sole enemy, for the first time in the history of the American Army, is a "Red" force on wheels—the Seventh Cavalry Brigade, Mechanized and Motorized: 2,200 men in over 400 vehicles, infantry on trucks, artillery drawn by trucks, motorcycles, scout cars, armored cars, machine gun cars and the dread combat cars or tanks. The mechanized cavalry is the latest toy of war.

Civil War Flavor Pervades Battlefield.

AND TOY IT IS, here today. I had expected, certainly, and yet I was astonished by, the air of unreality which hangs shimmering over these fields and woods. The flavor is not that of the Great War, but of our own Civil War. These might be photographs by Brady—the Division Headquarter's with their field desks and fly tents set up under the apple trees in a farmer's front yard; the troop of horse cavalry trotting down a shady lane; the company of infantry sprawled at ease beside a tobacco field. Even the combat cars, some seven tons of armor plate and airplane engine and quartet of machine guns, look faintly bucolic in the scrub oak thickets. Through it all there is a broad and hearty vein of prime fun.

This morning I stood in the direct line of battle, a neutral observer, invisible in the same sense as is the black-clad property man on a Chinese stage. There is a thunder-like surf about me. Roaring forward faster than a horse can gallop, with machine guns popping like strings of firecrackers, four troops of "Red" combat cars sweep forward toward the line of "Blues" across the field. Great, lumbering armored cars support the flanks; machine-gun carriers hold the conquered ground; smoke howitzer cars in the rear lay a screen, by hypothesis, for the advance. It is a stroke like Jove's arm, seemingly invincible.

But puffs of blue-gray smoke have dotted the line of "Blues;" they have been defending themselves with blank charges from the anti-tank .50 machine gun, from the powerful 75 millimeter field gun. There is a crescendo of noise and action, and then the umpires wave their white flags, everything stops dead, and the "Red" officers lean out of their turret tops, push back their shock helmets (for combat cars buck worse than a bronco), and light up their cigarettes as leisurely as if it were just after mess.

We wait to see how the umpires, from assumed casualties, will decide the fracas. I stroll around in the sunlight to ask a major of cavalry if I'll see him at the post movies that evening. "No, I can't stand Shirley Temple," he says.

Have I mentioned that the combat cars, by monoeuver orders, are always halted 100 yards short of the "Blue" line? The high command is fearful that somebody, stumbling under those massive catarpiller treads might get hurt.

Somebody might get hurt If this were war, and the "Red" smoke screen held solid, those combat cars would be slewing among the demorlized enemy, squelching them under foot like hop-toads, firing their machine guns 20 times through a man before he could fall, ripping up the line as easily as a bull in a butterfly net. If this were war, and the howitzers failed to effect their smoke screen, those armor-piercing bullets from the .50 calibre machine guns at 400 yards would make Swiss cheese of the comat cars.

Once, as a test, the experimenters fired a single .50 calibre bullet through the armored wall into one of these vehicles. In a space smaller than the interior of a Ford sedan, the shot ricocheted around inside for eight complete circuits, knocking steal splinters from the walls at each touch. If the crew of four men had been within, mincemeat would have been the result.

As for the .75's, let us say little. That shell, slightly under three inches in diameter, would just be going good at 400 yards. For if it meets no hindrance, it has the power to carry on for something over five miles! A whiff of wind to clear the smoke screen, point-blank range, and that, gentlemen, would be that.

War Book Contrasts Sham With Reality.

SO, FROM THIS sham battle, I came back comfortably in an official sedan to my tent. And, in a certain book, I read further about war as these earnest boys with their toys did not, perhaps, picture it. I intend no reflection on these soldiers; they would be as brave in battle as the best. But just what the best must endure in a modern war, just what misery and agony and degradation they must face, would be plainer to them from only a few pages of Arnold Zweig's "Education Before Verdun."

Here is a great novel, with several great messages, but just now I think only of its complete and annihilating overthrow of the notion of war as a sport. It is no sport, even for the heartiest mechanized cavalryman. It is mud and lice and the stink of corpses; it is shell fire to blast you into a peck of red particles against a stone wall, and a demolition bomb from a source you can scarcely see which literally will evaporate you in an instant; it is the year-long pall of powder smoke above Douaumont Fortress, and acres of freezing sludge before Verdun in which as many men as are playing here at Fort Knox can be smashed and drowned and chopped bone from bone in half a day.

Call it great fun to ride about in these toys of war and to try to outflank a battalion of Indiana National Guard. The boys enjoy it. So do the colonels and generals who saw the last war, no doubt, from G. H. Q. and Bordeaux. But if wise Herr Zweig were here in this Kentucky sunlight today, believe me, he would weep.

Britain-Egypt Pact Favored by Empire

London, Aug. 28 (AP).—Great Britain and Egypt tonight studied the text of their new treaty, ending British military occupation of Egypt, with mixed feelings. The general reception, however, was favorable.

Reports reaching London said initialing of the treaty led to celebrations in Egypt where guns were fired and flags hoisted. Crowds in the streets at Aboukir, the report said, cheered officers of the Royal Air Force and shouted "long live Anglo-Egyptian friendship!"

Little criticism of the treaty was noted in Egyptian circles here, although some sections of British opinion were not pleased.

Under the headline "Exodus," the evening news commented, "the best that can be said for the treaty is that we temporarily escape from a situation in which the national government has neither the ability nor the will to deal firmly, by the simple expedient of giving the Egyptians everything they demanded."

The treaty, signed Wednesday, has yet to be acted upon by the British parliament. It would become effective for 20 years after ratification.

Big Send-Off Goes Flat As Richman Defers Hop

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—The odds had been 10 to 1 that Dick Merrill, Eastern Air Lines pilot, and Harry Richman, radio entertainer, would take off for London from Folyd Bennett Airport here today.

An orchestra blared gala bon voyage tunes; the fence was torn down to clear the runway; trees lining the field were uprooted; the crowd of several thousand cheered.

The fliers then inspected the 41,000 ping-pong balls in the plane which will keep it floating if they land on the Atlantic and nonchalantly announced the flight was postponed until Sunday, because of bad weather.

Missionaries Flee Chinese Red Drive

Shanghai, Aug. 28 (AP).—Foreign missionaries, including many Americans, fled today before a Communist army surging eastward from Kasnu to Shensi Province.

It was estimated about 100 missionaries, about half of whom are believed Americans, are scattered through the province on Tibet's border.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Interview With a Hisser.

"Yes, I'm one of the best hissers the newsreels ever produced," said Hisser Number One, cornered in one of the larger movie houses immediately after the pictures of the Presidential campaign notables. He was pretty weak from hissing, as the reel had been a long one. "I've been hissing pictures ever since the war days; in fact, I got my start hissing the Kaiser. That gives you an idea how long I've been at it."

• • • •

"Who were you hissing just now, Landon or Roosevelt?" we asked.

"Oh, I hissed both of 'em. I'm impartial and want to play fair with both."

"But I notice some weeks the hissing is more pronounced for the Republican candidate than the Democratic and vice versa."

"That's the trouble. Most hissers are not dependable. A good many have no independence. They wait until the hissing starts and then join in if they think it's violent enough. The movie houses are full of these follow-the-leader hissers. Then there's the furtive type of hisser who looks all around to see if he recognizes anybody near him before hissing. I'm a straight from the heart hisser and I'll hiss anybody in any theater any time, especially in an election year."

• • • •

"Why hiss Presidential candidates? They're worthy men willing to serve their country."

"I guess it's hereditary. I come from an old line of hissers. My great-grandfather hissed Lincoln. His grandfather hissed Jefferson. They say some of my ancestors hissed Paul Revere and even booed his horse. The family theme song was always 'A Hiss in the Dark.'"

"It gets in the blood, eh?"

• • • • •

"Oh, yes. I had a great-aunt who gave the Bronx cheer to U. S. Grant and would have hissed Farragut only her hisses blew up at the last minute. My father often hissed Admiral Dewey, Teddy Roosevelt and Joe Wheeler."

• • • •

"What do you consider your greatest hissing feat?"

"It's hard to say. But I once hissed Woodrow Wilson, Gen. Foch and 700 feet of Lloyd George all in one newsreel."

"You say it is a matter of habit rather than an expression of disapproval?"

"As a general thing, yes. Of course in a Presidential campaign I sometimes get worked up over the grave issues and hiss one candidate more than the other."

"But what does it get you? All you need do to register disapproval is to vote."

"Vote?" asks Hisser Number One, a little puzzled. "What's that?"

"You cast a ballot," we exclaimed.

"Oh, that!" he exclaimed. "That would violate a family tradition. A true hisser never bothers to vote!"

Mutual.

Arts Club Redecorated For Start of Fall Season

Historic Home of President Monroe Offers Two Discoveries for Members Returning From Their Vacations.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Arts Club, historic home once occupied by President Monroe, and now the gathering place for members of Washington society who devote special interest to the arts, is undergoing redecoration in preparation for the fall season.

Every year some improvement is made at the clubhouse, 2017 I street, not in an effort to modernize it but rather to restore the colonial atmosphere of the original structure. This summer two discoveries have been made, one, that the painted mantels which had been thought to be wood or imitation marble or slate, were of handsome black and gold marble, the type used in the early nineteenth century. Old paneled woodwork also was found behind pillars which had been added to the doorway between the dining room and the reception hall some years after the house was built. Both mantels and woodwork will appear in their original dignity and beauty when the club, of which Mr. Lewis Lofton Moneyway is now president, begins its activities again in October.

The summer improvements at the clubhouse will be a surprise to many of the members who now are off on vacations and unaware of the work which is being done. Mr. Hugo Inden, who is one of the residents of the club, and an artist, is abroad, spending the summer in the Bavarian Alps, Berlin and Duesseldorf.

Many Out of City.

Among the other artists are Mrs. L. Morris Leisenring, Miss Elizabeth Sawtell, Miss May Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Eliot P. O'Hara, all of whom are in Ogunquitt, Me., for the season; Mrs. Eleanor Parke Custis, chairman of the art committee, who is in East Gloucester, Mass., Mrs. Susan B. Chase, vice chairman of the art committee, who is finding subjects for her painting in Mexico, where she and Miss Catherine Critcher are spending the season.

Miss Clara R. Saunders is in Provincetown, and Miss Bertha Noyer is painting in Massachusetts, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bittinger are in Duxbury, Mass.; Mr. Rowland Lyon, in Provincetown; Mr. Henry S. Hubbell, in Miami Beach; Mr. and Mrs. Frank McKenzie, in San Francisco; Dr. Robert E. Motley, in Woodstock, and Mrs. Margaret Zimmerle, in Great Barrington, Mass. Miss Saunders' sister, Miss Marie Saunders, a lay member of the club, is in Boston attending the meeting of the American Bar Association.

Mr. Murray Sheehan, of the drama committee, is another member of the club who is in Provincetown but instead of painting, he is devoting himself to writing—working on a new novel, say his friends.

Miss Priska Kaspar, who is a pianist, is spending the summer in Vienna, and Miss Minna Niemann, also a pianist of distinction, has been on the Riviera.

Mr. John Russell Mason is in New Hampshire. Mrs. Maud Howell Smith at Cape Cod, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Russell are in Vermont, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Coxhead are in Florida, Mr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the Washington Symphony Orchestra, who makes his home at the club when he is in Washington, has been in Maine, and Mrs. Walter E. Hilton and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Ellis Hilton, are both in Hollywood.

Going to New York.

Mr. Moneyway is leaving to spend ten days in New York. He had expected to go earlier, but was detained, partly by his interest in the progress of the work on the clubhouse.

When Mrs. Custis returns she will prepare for the art exhibitions, held under the sponsorship of her committee throughout the season. These are changed every two weeks and a Sunday afternoon tea marks the formal opening of each.

The club will have its usual formal dinners on Tuesday and Thursday evenings this season, with program following. The drama committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Maude Howell Smith, and Mr. Forney Reese, plans to present a series of modern American plays, one a month during the winter.

The group interested in sketching will meet every Monday evening under the leadership of Miss Clara Saunders; Mr. William S. Hepner will conduct the writers' group once a month on Saturday evenings and Mr. Charles Edward Russell, chairman of the literature committee, will have a poetry evening once a month which will be one of the new features of the year.

Ruth Bryan Owen And Her Husband Fly to New York

Mrs. Owen, accompanied by her husband, will begin immediately a two-month campaign for President Roosevelt, which she will conduct in a trailer. Capt. Rohde will drive.

They were in Washington only two days, during which time Mrs. Owen called at the State Department.

Italian Writer To Leave Capital

Countess di Carpenetto Will Go to New York City Tomorrow.

Countess di Carpenetto, correspondent for the Rome newspaper, Il Messagero, has returned to Washington and is writing her impressions of the Capital for her paper in a series of articles she is doing on the United States. She is staying at the Mayflower.

Although comparatively young, the countess is the author of nine novels and two plays. She arrived in this country a month ago with the party of Italian tourists which spent two days here and already has visited Chicago, Detroit, and other places in the Middle West. Tomorrow she will leave for New York, where she will remain a month before embarking for Italy.

The countess has been extensively entertained by members of the Italian Embassy staff here. Yesterday she lunched at the Mayflower with the Naval Attache, the Marquis of Sant' Orsola, and on Thursday lunched there with the Charge d'Affaires of the Embassy, the Marquis Rossi Longhi.

De Laboulaye And His Family Have Returned

French Embassy Undergoes Repairs; Ambassador Is Glad to Be Back.

Back in Washington again after a summer abroad, the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye are as glad to be home as their friends are to have them here. Their return has put to silence the rumors that the ambassador might be assigned to another post.

They did not find the embassy in apple pie order to welcome them. Instead they were greeted by ladders in the living room, tools in the dining room and a corps of carpenters—about 50 workmen, says Mme. de Laboulaye, although there are really too many to count—appearing in every doorway. Alterations are being made in both the living room and dining room and, despite the inconvenience of having things upset for awhile, Mme. de Laboulaye is interested in watching the progress of the work and offering occasional suggestions.

The ambassador and his family enjoyed their summer in France, although they found rainy weather all season, everywhere they were. They went first to Paris, later on a motor tour and then spent three weeks at their own home in Normandy. Their younger daughter, Agnes, and son, Francois, who were attending school in France last year, passed their examinations in July and then joined their parents for their vacation. They returned to America with them and their sister, Mlle. Marie Therese, aboard the Ile de France and came directly from New York to Washington.

Mr. Francois de Laboulaye will return to France in November to attend the School of Political Science in Paris. Mlle. Agnes de Laboulaye will reman here and study with private teachers until later in the winter, when she also will return to school in France.

The Rev. A. S. Mowbray performed the ceremony, which took place in the home of the bride's parents, in Takoma Park.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown, made on princess lines. Her veil of tulle was attached to a coronet of satin trimmed with lace and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses with lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Elsie Loraine Herbert, the maid of honor, wore a gown of white mousseline de soie over pink and carried pink roses.

The bride's other attendant was Mrs. Marjorie Stuckey who wore a gown of green mousseline de soie trimmed with yellow.

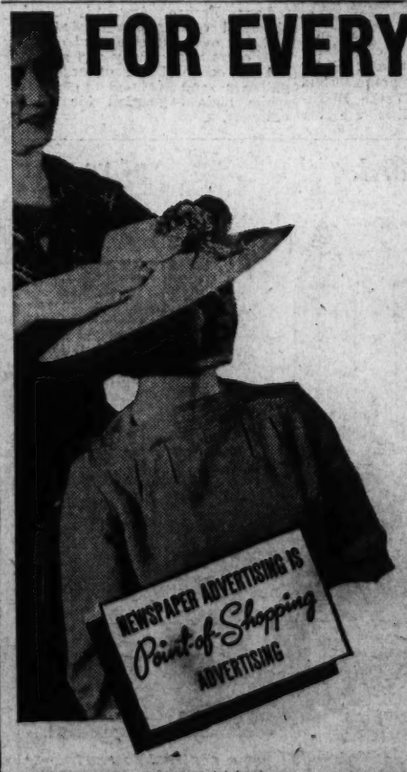
FOR EVERY 20 FAMILIES —A RETAILER



Keeping unbroken vigil over the myriad wants of the 30,000,000 U. S. families are more than 1,500,000 retailers—one to each twenty families. No other nation is better served.

Chief means of contact between retailers and consumers is the newspaper because virtually everybody reads it every day.

Consumers read newspaper advertising with eager interest because it tells them where, when and how to buy the things they want. Many consumers consult no other source for this information.

Because newspaper advertising has the proved ability to mould shopping habits, retailers spend $382,000,000.00 annually for newspaper advertising—far more than for any other kind of sales promotion.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

A Bone-Destroying Tumor.

In our earlier discussions it has been noted that tumors may arise almost anywhere in the body. They differ greatly, however, in character and in what they do. Some are simply in the way. They may crowd other tissues and interfere mechanically with the behavior of certain organs. In many instances, as with fatty tumors, huge lumps may form beneath the skin of the back or between the shoulders. These are not dangerous to life. Nevertheless, they may increase to sizable dimensions and appear as deformities. Such affairs are among the harmless or benign varieties.

We are familiar with the fact that the long bones are hollow and contain in their interior a mass of cells and fat called the marrow. These areas constitute the birthplace of new blood cells which are produced in great numbers each day. We cannot expect the blood to contain the correct proportion of cells unless the bone marrow is healthy and active.

When something goes wrong with these marrow cells a peculiar growth may start which has many of the earmarks of cancer. It is called myeloma and appears most often in the ribs, the shoulder blades, the breast bone, the bony segments of the spinal column, and in the long bones of the arms and legs. More cases are found between the ages of 40 and 60, although no period of life is exempt.

Pain Intermittent.

As a rule, the patient will complain first of occasional pain accentuated now and then with sharp twinges. The cause of the pain is pressure on the covering of the bone (periosteum) and on the neighboring nerve fibers. As the condition continues anemia often results.

Unfortunately the early symptoms are all too frequently mistaken for the aches that may accompany arthritis, and the diagnosis may be delayed because of the seemingly minor discomfort. In the examining physician is cautious he will probably recommend a careful X-ray study of the site of the pain. If the tumor has progressed, evidence of destruction will then be disclosed. The diseased portions will show in the pictures as rounded or punched out spaces in varying size.

The symptoms may be entirely disregarded and the first intimation received by the patient may be a spontaneous fracture of an affected bone. This occurs although no injury has been sustained. The reason is that the bone has become so thinned by the tumor cells that it can no longer withstand the pressure placed upon it.

Reason Unknown.

No clew has been obtained as yet as to just why these marrow elements start to grow. There is a lack of a control element somewhere. The suggestion has been offered that the role of those busybodies—activators of metabolism (vitamins, hormones, enzymes, etc.)—must be investigated thoroughly. At any rate, every now and then tissue components, like runaway horses with the bits in their teeth, do violence to the normal functioning of the body.

CAPITAL MANNERS

Correct Riding Togs Need Not Put Dent in Pocketbook.

NOW THAT RIDING has become such a general pursuit in Washington, the question of correct—and also inexpensive riding togs—is one that many girls face.

At one time only persons with leisure and money who owned their own horses were seen on the city's bridle paths. Now, however, horses can be hired by the hour and many employed young women find riding a restful recreation after office hours. The following letter is from a young woman Government clerk:

DEAR MISS WALLACE: I have the opportunity to ride after office hours twice a week. I know how to ride as I learned on my father's farm in Indiana. I cannot spend much money for riding clothes. Do you think I would appear properly dressed if I bought some jodhpurs and nice-looking shoes to go with them and then wore the tailored shirts I wear with my tailored suit? I also have a tailored hat and gloves suitable for tailored wear. I would like to ride without a hat as I wear my hair very short."

May Ride Bare-Headed.

The riding clothes you mention would be proper at this time of year. The time is coming when the late afternoon might be rather cool for just a tailored shirt and jodhpur. A bright-hued sweater would be better than a coat that did not look well on horseback. Riding hats of some kind are proper, but many women, including Mrs. Roosevelt, do not wear hats on the Washington bridle paths.

Twin Sweater in New Version

Sweater twins have gone complicated this season! They are now appearing in the smart and youthful sweater-blouse and jumper style, as shown above, also in pullover types topped with swank little boleros. Black and white fashions the twins pictured, but there are endless possibilities for chic color themes: wine with gray or blue, brown with natural or green, white and any of the high-fashion deep tones. For directions for knitting this twin set, send a 3-cent stamp to Ethel Ehlen, The Post Fashion Editor.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Command Young Man's Full Attention Without Seeming to Pursue Him Is Girl's Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: There is a young man in town whom I like very much. He has said that he likes me a lot, too. I was introduced to him by his brother, whom I have known for quite a while. He works in a store which I have occasion to visit quite often and I see him almost every day. We are both 25.

* * * *

He comes to see me rather often, takes me out and is very nice to me. He had been going with another girl for some time before we met, but he has told me that since meeting me he cares less for her. However, he still goes to see her. I do not want to put myself in the position of running after him, because I don't think such measures are necessary if a man really likes a girl.

* * * *

I do not want to seem rude in cutting the other girl out, as various persons have told me I could do if I tried. But I wish you would tell me how, in your opinion, I might gain this man's whole attention without showing my interest in him too plainly. Please answer as soon as possible. Thank you.

POSSESSIVE.

Technique of Pursuit.

DEAR POSSESSIVE: It has always seemed to me that the way to gain a man's full attention—or a woman's either, for that matter—is to make no secret of one's interest in that person. How to hold someone's interest after it has once been gained is something else again. If this man has known easy success with women, a display of independence, a certain amount of self-sufficiency, and a lively interest in other persons and things will probably help you to hold his interest. If he is girl shy and has known few girls and had few romantic attachments, he might respond best to candid pursuit. He might be enormously flattered by the thought that you were pursuing him, and might in the end become your willing victim. However, it is very difficult to make constructive suggestions about how to win or hold a man's interest unless one first knows a great deal about the man in question.

* * * *

I suggest you study your man and also study the girl he has been interested in. Find out, as tactfully as possible, what he likes and what he dislikes in women and conduct yourself in accordance with your findings. Incidentally, it is never advisable for a woman to make a habit of calling upon a man at his place of work, and I would suggest that you cut your visits to his store down to a tantalizing minimum. Such pursuit of him as you may deem advisable should be done after working hours and away from his workaday environment.

* * * *

Intelligent pursuit of a man usually takes the form of interesting one's self in the things which interest him, so that one has a legitimate excuse for crossing his path, soliciting his opinion and making casual-seeming bids for his company. Also, it usually takes the form of ignoring the existence of other women in his scheme of things. I would advise you to show no interest in the fact that he still calls on the other girl, and not to press him with questions as to how much he likes her versus you. The most effective way to erase her from his memory is to prove yourself the ideal companion, agreeable, charming, attractive, sympathetic and stimulating.

* * * *

If you could substitute luncheon engagements for those daily encounters at the store, I think it would be much more to your advantage. For instance, suppose he is calling on you one evening and, in leaving, asked "Will I see you downtown tomorrow?" You might say, "Well, I have some errands to do, but I don't expect to be at Blank's. Why don't you meet me for lunch at Doe's?" If his salary is small, you can lunch dutch-treat, yet make the occasion so gay, so pleasant, that he will unconsciously look forward to a repeat engagement as a delightful break in a tiresome day.

* * * *

A woman who meets a man by appointment, however much of her own maneuvering that appointment may be, has an inestimable advantage over the woman whose only hope of meeting a man is by barging up to him at his place of business. The first woman is poised and self-assured; the second, decidedly unsure of herself and of her welcome.

Dual Dishes Help to Solve Kitchen for 2

List of Equipment Given for Cooking on Small Scale.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE young woman, whether she is newly married or a business woman, who is living in her first apartment and doing her own cooking for the first time this fall will be interested in the request sent in this week by a woman from Virginia, who wishes to equip her small kitchen for cooking for two. This woman wants a complete list of equipment, but she also states that she does not wish to be extravagant in her purchase as there is not much money left for buying pots and pans.

Kitchen utensils can, of course, be purchased from 10 cents up. Some of the cheaper utensils are very good, and if they do not require too constant use, the less expensive ones will hold up for some time. A utensil, however, that is to receive constant use should be fairly substantial to begin with or else frequent replacing of the article will make it just as costly in the end as a better one would have been in the beginning.

Double Duty Dishes.

There are many modern cooking utensils that can be used in numerous ways which means that one pan will do the work of several. The heat-resistant glass casseroles, for example, are not as expensive as they might seem at first glance because the one dish will serve four purposes. First it is a casserole; second, with attachable handle it becomes a saucepan; third, it is a serving dish for the table, and fourth, a refrigerator dish in which to store leftovers. A woman who invests in this type of dish will naturally exclude some of the other dishes on the list.

The same idea may be applied to other utensils. You may feel that you would like to have a set of individual custard cups. These will do nicely for individual main dishes, desserts and muffins or cup cakes, so the muffin pans listed may be omitted. Small ramekins in a set of four or six may be substituted for a casserole if you find it more convenient to cook small amounts in separate serving dishes.

Size of Utensils.

Many of the other utensils suggested will do double duty. The flat cake tin, about 2 inches deep, may be used also for baking meats and fish that do not have to be covered. The larger frying pan, if it is a deep one made of heavy material and has a cover, can be used for cooking tougher cuts of meat that would otherwise be cooked in a Dutch oven. The larger saucepan, if it is a heavy one, will be ideal for deep fat frying if a wire basket is added to the equipment. A double boiler may be used for sauces or steaming as a unit or for boiling as two pans.

The following list of kitchen utensils includes just the ones necessary for cooking average well-rounded meals. Other articles may be purchased later when there is a demand for them.

1. 1 1-quart double boiler.
2. 1 1-quart saucepan (with lid).

10. 3 9-inch cake tins.
11. 1 or 2 9-inch pie tins.
12. 1 cookie sheet.
13. 1 sheet cake pan about 2 inches deep.

HE MADE A TEN-YEAR TEST WITH ALL-BRAN

Say good-bye to the headaches, the low spirits, the sleeplessness that often follow common constipation. Just read this letter:

"In 1926, I started using ALL-BRAN. And now, after ten years, during which I have put Kellogg's ALL-BRAN to a long, hard test, I am writing you this letter. It is better to eat this food and be in condition, than to resort to laxatives." —Bernard Altman, 63 Goodale Road, Mattapan, Mass.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will help you too. Its "bulk" absorbs moisture within the body, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the system. Tests prove it is safe and effective.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Either as a cereal, or in recipes. How much better to use this food than to take patent medicines. Buy ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

The Oldest Cooking Utensil Goes Moderne

This moderne Dutch oven of shining aluminum, with its rounded corners, dome cover, smooth bottom and heat-proof handles, is a sharp contrast to the grim, black iron pot that used to adorn the old-fashioned kitchen. This new model will appeal to the young bride or business woman who is keeping house in economical style, for in its depths the less expensive meats may be cooked to perfection.

Nagging a Child With 'Don'ts' Does Not Insure Obedience

Better Plan Is for Parent to Find Constructive Work to Divert Attention From Mischief Planned; Reprimands Too Frequently Given Become Ineffective.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"Leave that cat alone." "Don't strum on the piano." "Please keep out of my work-box." "Stop playing with the shade cord."

Which was the more exasperated and which the more exasperating, mother or child, it is hard to say. The child was bored, the mother busy. In the end, the child was sent out of the room and probably, wherever he went, got into mischief.

The mother would, in the long run, have saved herself some time and much annoyance, if she had left whatever she was doing long enough to give the child some constructive directions. To keep telling an idle child not to do this and that, simply confines his energy more and more until it reaches a bursting-point He must be given some outlet or trouble is sure to follow.

What this child wanted was attention and relief from boredom, and he was determined to get it by fair means or foul. His mother was equally determined not to grant this wish, and yet was obliged to give him half her attention all the time. No one can guide or control a child with half his mind.

Never to say "don't," never to stop a child from the mischief he plans, is quite impossible. No one has the time or the presence of mind always to give positive rather than negative directions or to have a counter-attraction at hand. A child must learn that there are things which it cannot do.

As far as possible, however, "Don'ts" and "Stops" and "You-must-nots" should be avoided. They too easily become a habit and make the child's life unsatisfactory and inhibited.

If he seems bored and at loose ends, it is time to do something positive to relieve the situation. A few moments of concentrated attention from the mother would have been of more value than the half-measures she used.

Vegetable Leftovers.

When saving vegetable leftovers which are to be used later in salads, rinse off with warm water to remove seasonings and butter before storing in refrigerator.

Corn Futures Dip on Supply Of Argentina

Wheat and Other Grains Follow Corn in Downward Trend.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—Led by corn, which was influenced partly by a report of the offering of Argentine corn sharply below the domestic market, grain prices plunged downward swiftly just before trading in futures ended today.

September corn broke 4 cents, the limit permitted for one session. The three corn futures closed 2⅜ to 4 cents lower, compared with yesterday's finish; September 1.06½; December, 92⅜ to 92⅝, and May, 88¾ to 88⅞.

Wheat lost 2½ to 3½, September closing at 1.08½ to 1.08¾; December, 1.07¾ to 1.07⅞; May, 1.06¾ to 1.06⅞; oats dropped ⅞ to 1¼; December to 42⅝; rye was off 2⅜ to 2¾, and barley, 2 to 3 cents. Provisions fell 12 to 22 cents. All grains closed at the lows for the day.

Com. Credit Raises Rate, Votes Extra

Baltimore, Aug. 28.—At the regular meeting of the directors of Commercial Credit Co. here today, the regular quarterly dividend of $1.06¼ per share was declared on the 4¼ per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock. The board declared a quarterly dividend of $1 per share on the common stock, which increases the annual rate from $3 to $4 per share; and also declared an extra dividend on the common stock of 25 cents per share.

In addition, the directors carried out their previously declared intention by the declaration of a 20 per cent stock dividend on the common, the stockholders at the special meeting held yesterday having approved an amendment to the certificate of incorporation increasing the authorized shares of common stock to 3,000,000 shares. All dividends are payable September 30 to stock holders of record September 10.

Maryland Fund Extra.

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 28.—Directors of the Maryland Fund, Inc. announces the declaration of the regular quarterly distribution of 5 cents per share. In addition, announcement is also made of the declaration of a 2½ cents extra distribution, payable September 15 to stockholders of record August 31.

Southern Kraft Corp. To Build New Mill

New York, Aug. 28.—R. J. Cullen, president of International Paper and Power Co., announced today that one of its principal subsidiaries, Southern Kraft Corporation, will proceed with construction of a new kraft mill in the South.

The new mill will come into production next year, increasing Southern Kraft Corporation's kraft board capacity by 120,000 tons a year and its kraft paper capacity by 30,000 tons a year.

Auto Production.

Detroit, Aug. 28 (AP).—Ward's Automotive reports in its weekly review of motor car plant activity estimates today that production for the current week will total 59,237 cars and trucks, compared with 71,935 last week and 52,395 for the same week last year.

Silver Surplus Useless Hoard, Bank Declares

Only Effect Has Been to Upset China, Says N. Y. Trust Co.

New York, Aug. 28.—After more than two years' operation of the silver purchase act, says the Index of the New York Trust Co. today, the Government's program in behalf of silver has had little tangible effect other than to cause violent fluctuations in the price of the metal and so demoralize China's economic structure as to force her to abandon the silver standard.

"At the same time," the review continues, "Treasury purchases of silver have continued to build up an unprecedented hoard of silver in this country, for which there is no real use, without making any appreciable progress toward the stipulated goal of a three-to-one ratio with our gold reserves. Our heavy gold imports have kept pace with silver purchases and consequently the only domestic effect of accumulating these silver stocks, apart from profits accruing to our small silver mining industry, has been the inflationary increase of outstanding silver certificates."

The Index estimates that Treasury silver holdings in June amounted to $2,034,000,000, exclusive of open market purchases in 1936, in comparison with $891,000,000 at the time of passage of the act two years earlier. However, as a consequence of a 37 per cent increase in gold stocks, the additional silver required by the law had been reduced only from $1,319,000,000 to $1,111,000,000. Government expenditures in purchasing this silver are estimated at about $575,000,000.

"While there is little likelihood that we could ever dispose of our present silver holdings at the prices at which they were built up," the Index concludes, "the maintenance of a false price by continued purchases would be only an illusory advantage, and, in the long run, tend to circumscribe still further the natural outlets for silver which determine its real value."

Curb Stocks Firm; Industrials Higher

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—A comfortable number of industrials along with some of the utilities pushed ahead for substantial gains today in a generally firm curb market.

Some of the widest gains, ranging from 1 to around 3 points were registered for Montgomery Ward "A" at 148; Newmont Mining, ex dividend, at 36¾; McWilliams Dredging, at 86½; Standard Oil of Ohio, at 31¾; Aluminum Co. of America, at 130¾; American Gas, at 43½; Pan American Airways, at 5, and Niagara Hudson Power, at 15¾. On fairly light turnover American Manufacturing gained 3¼, at 39.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance in Active Trading; Steels and Rails Lead; Wheat and Corn Drop.

New York, Aug. 28.—Stocks proved able to advance for more than one day, which encouraged the bulls into thinking that something more than a minor turn in a downward movement was under way. Stock trading volume was slightly under a million and a half, and prices were the best in the last hour of the dealings. Gains were modest enough for the majority of stocks, but strength was there. Bonds were firm. Farm products by contrast were heavily sold as speculators feared they had over-estimated price possibilities. September wheat closed 3¼ cents lower at 108¾ cents a bushel and September corn dropped 4 cents to 106½ cents.

Steel shares continued to play a leading part in the market's advance, but they were less buoyant than yesterday. Motors also were strong, but lagged behind the rails. In no group were the gains as large as yesterday, a natural sequence to trading that follows a few hours in which short covering is active. In the rail list Delaware & Hudson and Santa Fe, with 2 points each, Great Northern, Central and Nickel Plate were popular.

General Motors absorbed profit taking with only a fractional setback and pushed forward in the last hour. Chrysler swung along a point higher most of the time. Yellow Truck preferred pumped half a dozen points. Lack of excitement over the possibility of a wage increase in the steel industry and assurance of rising activity at the mills gave a fillip to the shares.

After opening at the best price in five years, Bethlehem had a slight setback. Youngstown and Crucible sold at new tops. National gained a point. Public utility shares were fairly active, with gains limited to a point or so. Telephone recovered. American Power issues pressed forward. Public Service, Consolidated Edison and Columbia Gas found favor.

Less Fear of Drought.

In the miscellaneous group special strength was shown by Allied Mills, American Bank Notes, A. M. Byers, Commercial Credit, Crosley Radio, Philip Morris, U. S. Freight, and U. S. Pipe. Norwalk Tire & Rubber preferred, on the other hand, broke to the lowest price in four years. New high prices were paid for Continental Baking and Ward Baking preferreds. Liquor issues held their strength, one of them rising more than 2 points. Farm implements hardened, as did the oils.

Farm shares for some time have moved contrary to grain prices, doubtless on the speculative theory that any decline in grains indicated less damage from the drought than at first supposed would result. Today the sharp decline in wheat and corn raised the hope that, political journeys to the contrary notwithstanding, the drought areas might not after all prove to be a major force in stopping business recovery.

Rising Business.

Market sentiment, encouraged yesterday by the better tone of the foreign war news and helped also by freshening prospects for a lightening of New Deal influence in the country, was aided further by some week-end trade statistics. Reviewing the changes last month, the Federal Reserve Board reported a strong advance against the seasonal trend. Making seasonal adjustments, the board's index of industrial activity advanced to 108 per cent in June. Along with the rise in production, factory employment also increased last month.

Carrying the survey further, the pace in the first three weeks of August, the board says, was maintained in the steel industry, but declined in automobiles, because of preparation of new models. A more recent survey by the Department of Commerce suggests that for the third week of August a fresh upturn in the motor industry will be shown. Other indices reported were increases last month in production of consumption goods, rising retail trade and rising commodity prices, all against the seasonal trend.

It had been predicted last spring that the momentum of business recovery and perhaps also the influence of the huge bonus distribution would result in lightening the pressure of the usual summer recession. Actually, in line of any recession further progress has been made. Looking at the position as it now is, any share decline over the next few months does not seem probable, in spite of the election disturbance.

Francs at Gold Point.

Among the day's contributions to business indices were the report of the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank, detailing decided trade expansion in the Northwest this summer, in spite of the drought talk, and the further gain shown in commercial loans in this district. Business borrowing has been rising here for several weeks. That is a seasonal development, but is nonetheless a healthy sign. Brokers' loans this week also increased, without any obvious explanation in the action of the speculative markets. Most probably Government bond dealers borrowed some money for carrying Government securities that mature September 15. Their position would give them an advantage as subscribers to a new issue.

Foreign exchanges picked up a little, with the swing of sentiment against the involving of France in the political fighting now devastating Spain. However, the strength in forward francs did not apply to the spot rate, which was below the gold point. Sterling hardened.

Steel Wages.

Some units of the steel industry predict that no increase in wages will take place. Others seem to be on the fence, and still others admit the likelihood of an increase before long, if steel company earnings continue to rise. President Weir of the National Steel Co. thinks no rise is on the way. The United States Steel Corporation officials won't admit that the higher wage talk is anything more than wishful thinking. Republic Steel, on the other hand, in a public statement says that requests for higher wages have come and are being considered, and suggests that the requests might be granted if prospects continue to improve, but that the present financial position of the company does not warrant an increase at this time. On the record it would appear that any substantial increase in steel company profits from this level may mean higher wages or labor troubles, which in turn would mean higher selling prices.

Italian Loan.

A dispatch from Rome suggesting that this Government might recognize special consideration for a proposed Italian treasury loan, to enable flotation in this country, seems to reach a new top in hopefulness. It is recognized in Italy, the dispatch says, that the Johnson act would forbid such a loan (Italy being in default to the United States Government), but an exception might be made, the Italians hope, in order to give 10,000,000 patriotic Italians living abroad a chance to help their homeland. Waiving the fact that so many Italians living here and in other countries still regard Italy as their country of allegiance, and that nothing prevents them from sending all the money to Italy that they can get hold of, it still is true that President Roosevelt is not yet quite in the same strong position as the Italian leader and planner, who can enforce and suspend the laws and alter their application at will. An Italian loan floated in this country, so long as the Johnson law is on the statute books, is quite out of the question, which is another way of saying that it will be out of the question until the Italian government renews payments on its debt to this country.

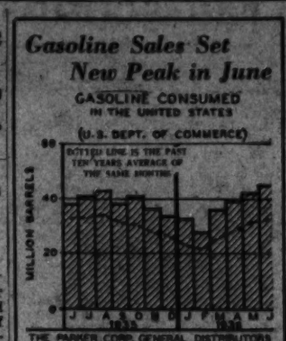
Gasoline Sales Set New Peak in June



Boston, Mass., Aug. 28.—More gasoline was consumed in this country in June than in any month on record. The total retail price of this gasoline, however, which was close to $7,500,000, was not the largest total. Higher gasoline prices prior to 1930 brought monthly retail sales well above the $8,000,000 mark.

Railroad Credit Corp. To Make 10% Payment

The Railroad Credit Corporation on Monday will make to the participating rail carriers the largest liquidating distribution so far made by it at any one time, E. G. Buckland, president of that corporation, announced yesterday. The distribution will amount to $7,354,139, or 10 per cent of the fund originally contributed by the carriers participating in the marshalling and distributing plan, 1931.

The Railroad Credit Corporation was organized by the railroads to make loans to those rail carriers in need of funds to prevent them from defaulting fixed interest obligations.

This will bring the total amount distributed by the Railroad Credit Corporation to $46,331,074, or 63 per cent of the fund originally contributed by the participating carriers. Of the latter amount, $22,475,584 will have been returned in cash and $23,855,490 in credits.

Business Rides Over Expected Summer Slump

Week's Index Is 79.1% of Normal, Highest Since May, 1931.

New York, Aug. 28.—The vitality of business this summer has amazed even the most sanguine. The anticipated summer slump proved a complete washout. Business Week's index reached 79.1 per cent of normal last week, the best since May, 1931. Though uneasiness over the European situation is voiced in some markets, the general tone of domestic comments continues optimistic as far as fall business prospects are concerned. Neither drought fears, election uncertainties, nor obscurities of the Robinson-Patman act have cut much of a figure in buying programs.

Steel is in a jam. Orders calling for quick delivery are sorely taxing mill capacity. Small wonder, then, that such items as these should crop up in the past two weeks: a $5,000,000 steel mill reconditioning contract, a $1,000,000 tin plate mill, and registration of a bond issue of which $20,000,000 is slated for more finishing-mill capacity.

What the price trend for steels will be next quarter should be apparent shortly. If wage increases are granted, price increases are almost certain to follow. Rail prices which seemed a sure bet for such an increase, however, were reaffirmed up to November 1 for deliveries to the end of the year.

Eastern railroads are reporting embarrassing success with the 2-cent fare. A gain of about 20 per cent in passenger revenue over July, 1935, is being forecast for the group as a whole. Railroads that had virtually decided passenger traffic was a losing proposition in view of bus competition are now showing revived interest in this division of their business.

July net operating income is expected to be double that of a year ago and August ought to show a fair but smaller margin. With earnings picking up, new equipment buying becomes more pressing. Unfilled orders for locomotives stood at 125 at the end of July, as against 45 a year ago.

Carloadings will be closely watched from now until the October peak for signs of how the drought will affect total shipments. Shippers in the Northwest expect that 50 per cent less grain will be moved in the third quarter, but look for a 15 per cent over-all gain in freight. Increased shipments of manufactured goods are expected to offset reductions in farm products, and to bring carloadings up to the 800,000 mark at the fall peak.

U. S. Worker Group Fails In Recall Plan

New Deal A.F.G.E. Units Are Unable to Muster Needed Strength.

Left Wing and Liberal Delegates Combine to Halt Move.

Left wing and liberal delegates to the District department of the American Federation of Government Employes united last night to stalemate the efforts of conservatives to deprive temporary lodges of representation and to empower the department to oust "objectionable" delegates.

The vote which was the first test of strength between the so-called "New Deal" lodges, who have initiated recall proceedings against the four Washington members of the national executive council, and the conservative lodges who are supporting these council members, showed a substantial majority for the conservatives but fell short of the two-thirds necessary to amend the constitution.

There was standing room only in the department's meeting room at the Hotel Hamilton and the voice of the secretary taking the roll call vote was repeatedly drowned out by the noise from delegates and alternates. The official tabulation, completed after several vote challenges and interruptions and much parliamentary maneuvering by President James G. Yaden was 63 against 93, with 22 lodges voting solidly "no," 16 solidly "yes" and 6 splitting their ballots.

Two Amendments Listed.

Two constitutional amendments were to have been brought up at the meeting by the conservatives, one giving the department the right to refuse to seat any newly elected delegate and to unseat objectionable delegates, and the second to deprive lodges with temporary charters of representation in the department.

Neither amendment came up to a vote, the test of strength coming on a proposed substitute to the first amendment which would have softened its meaning by providing for a hearing for any delegate whose expulsion was sought and limiting the power of the department to requesting the lodge to elect another delegate.

The substitute amendment was introduced by Walter L. Disbrow, of the Navy Yard Lodge, No. 93, who afterwards explained that his measure was inspired "not because I favor the left wingers, but because I think the principle of free speech is essential to American Federation of Labor principles and because I want the organization to remain a united, constructive body."

Although the conseravtives had no difficulty in voting down the substitute amendment, the final tabulation showed that they lacked the two-thirds voting strength needed to put their own amendments through. On conservative-supported motions both amendments were then tabled.

Will Delay Settlement.

Although with the motions tabled, conservatives may spring a surprise at some subsequent meeting by bringing the amendments to a vote when a two-thirds strength is insured, the tabling of the motion was generally interpreted as delaying the settling of the question until after the national convention in Detroit in mid-September.

National Treasurer Cecil E. Custer and vice presidents, Michael D. Schaefer, G. Carroll Dimond and Ira Y. Bain, whose recall is being sought, were supported solidly by their own lodges, the Civil Service Commission, Navy, Adjutant General's Office and Internal Revenue units, respectively.

Other lodges voting solidly "no" were Public Buildings, Weather, Postoffice, St. Elizabeths, No. 28; Tariff, Employment Commission, Public Health, Emergency Relief, District Government, Mount Alto, St. Elizabeths, No. 98; AAA, Liberty Loan, Capital Parks, National Training School, Government Printing Office, Elevator Operators and Labor Lodge, No. 228.

Those voting solidly "yes" were Commerce, Labor No. 12, Veterans Administration, Library of Congress, Agriculture, Navy Yard, District Jail, Internal Revenue Agents, W. P. A., G. L. O. D., Resettlement, Farm Credit, Bolling Field, Securities and Exchange Commission, Public Assistance Division and Social Security, Labor, Resettlement, Veterans, Agriculture and W. P. A. are leading the recall fight.

Lodges splitting their votes were Bureau of Standards, General Account ingOffice, Treasury, Engraving and Printing, Interior, Mail Equipment.

Suspect Arrested In Butler Threat

The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced yesterday its agents had arrested Fred Mahan, an ex-convict, at Cisco, Tex., on a charge of attempted extortion from Samuel Butler, of Eastland, Tex., brother of Gen. Smedley D. Butler, fiery former Marine.

The announcement said Mahan was accused of sending a letter to Butler, president of the Arab Gasoline Corporation, demanding $3,000 and threatening to kill his children.

Mahan's arrest, the bureau said, was effected with co-operation of Cisco police before any money had been transferred.

McLean Daughter Seeks New Name

Permisison to change the name of her 14-year-old daughter from Evalyn Beale McLean to Evalyn Washington McLean was sought in District Court yesterday by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, Washington socialite.

Explaining that one of her sons bore the name "Beale" and thus perpetuated that part of the ancestral name, Mrs. McLean said, in the petition, that she wished also to perpetuate the name of her daughter's great-grandfather, Washington McLean.

Miss McLean once before has changed a portion of her name. In 1933 a court order changing her name from Emily Beale McLean to Evalyn Beale McLean was issued. The present request to change the name probably will become final next month as a matter of procedure.

D. C. Children Visit Playgrounds To Show Summer Handicraft

Fifty Boys and Girls Place Work on Exhibit at Judiciary Square; Bessie Scordelis Wins First Prize for Sewing.

Hundreds of boys and girls gathered at nearly a dozen of the city's playgrounds yesterday afternon and exhibited the work they have done these last few months.

The girls brought dolls and dresses they have made. The boys brought pictures they had drawn and models they had made from clay.

Prizes were awarded the best work in various classes.

At the Judiciary Square Playground more than 50 children placed their work on exhibit and nearly as many mothers and fathers came to see what their boys and girls had been doing this summer.

Bessie Scordelis, of 511 E street northwest, was awarded the first prize for sewing. Three other children were give first prizes. For embroidery, Frances Le Quester, 606 Fifth street northwest; for clay modeling, Nan Lew, 606 Fifth street northwest, and for sewing dresses, Marie Chauraha, 517 Sixth street northwest.

Turkeys Imported From Britain to Aid Housewives in U. S.

Eleven short-legged, white turkeys arrived yesterday at the Department of Agriculture, where they will be used in an effort to breed a new type of turkey which will be streamlined and look like a duck.

The birds, which were imported from England, are known as "Austrians" and weigh not more than 10 pounds apiece. They will be crossed with domestic breeds which weigh from 14 to 21 pounds in an effort to develop a strain which will fit into modern roasting pans, it was explained by Dr. Hugh C. McPhee, chief of the division of animal husbandry.

Most turkeys in this country grow too large for this purpose, Dr. McPhee stated. The English birds will be placed at a Government experiment station and any good strains developed will be made available to American turkey raisers. This process probably will take several years, Dr. McPhee said.

WPA Unit to Drop 200 Aids Monday

From 200 to 300 employes of the Project Control Division of the Works Progress Administration will receive dismissal notices Monday, it was reported yesterday.

The dismissals are to be effected through a reorganization of the Project Control Division with approximately one-half of the employes being dropped. At present there are about 500 employed in the division.

The reorganization of the unit which supervises the processing of projects throughout the country is believed to be part of a general movement among emergency agencies to reduce daministrative costs. Resettlement Administration has been reported preparing for a 15 to 20 per cent reduction of its personnel to be staggered through September and October.

WPA Lodge, No. 139, of the American Federation of Government Employes has called an open meeting for Monday at 5 p. m. at the Hotel Washington for workers who receive dismissal notices.

Dan the Horse Dies Amid City Traffic's Roar

Volunteers' Efforts to Aid Veteran Cart Horse Prove in Vain.

Dan, a horse, died at New York avenue and North Capitol street last night with the roar of traffic in his ears and the eyes of a curious throng upon him. He was 9 years old.

For three years Dan pulled a trash and express cart for his owner, William Ferguson, 65-year-old colored man who lives at 754 Harvard street northwest. Last night, at the end of the day's work, Dan collapsed on New York avenue.

When Ferguson's efforts to get the horse to his feet proved futile, a crowd of volunteers went to work. A dozen of them seized Dan and carried him from the street to a lawn in front of the Triangle Motor Co., at 2 New York avenue northwest.

By this time traffic in the vicinity had been snarled for a full half hour and several hundred persons had gathered.

Then the volunteers did their best to get him to his feet. Several times they pulled him upright and each time he fell again, too weak to stand.

At last, W. P. Collins, Animal Rescue League veterinarian, arrived. He took the horse's pulse and shook his head. As Ferguson looked on, tears gleaming behind his spectacles, Collins pulled out a black, long-barreled pistol and fired a shot. Dan was dead.

Modernizing Of Fire Alarm System Urged

Kern Proposes 5-Year Program; Requests 9 New Employes.

Roberts Promises to End Chiseling if He Is Given Free Hand.

By James D. Secrest.

Complete modernization of the municipal fire alarm system, extending over a 5-year period, is proposed by Walter E. Kern, electrical engineer, in 1938 estimates released yesterday by the District Commissioners. An initial appropriation of $34,056 and a 5-year expenditure of $130,280 is requested.

"Large sections of the city built up winthin the past four years are wholly without fire-alarm protection. A service all are entitled to, because funds in the past have not been sufficient to keep up with building improvements," Kern said. Numerous requests have been received for fire-alarm boxes, but we have been able to do practically nothing in this respect.

Included in the 5-year program are the following projects: Replacement of 408 obsolete fire-alarm boxes, installation of 100 new boxes in new sections of the city, and installation of 10 new box-alarm circuits in the central office.

The electrical department estimates total $1,128,216 as against $988,300 in current appropriations, but the increase is due chiefly to the fire-alarm system improvement program and a renewal of a request made last year for $55,000 to complete the radio speech input system and additional telephone stations in police stations.

Seeks 9 New Employes.

Kern estimates it would cost $11,500 to place all employes in his department on standard hours as prescribed by the Civil Service Commission. He asked nine new employes because of increased activity.

Budget requests of a score of administrative agencies also were released yesterday by the Commissioners.

George M. Roberts, superintendent of weights, measures and markets, in asking for an additional clerk, promised a renewed campaign against "chiseling," provided he is not "interfered with."

"The large amount of cheating and chiseling which prevailed within various classes of business while the inspection and investigational force was inadequate," Roberts said, "has already been greatly curtailed, and large savings to consumers, reasonably estimated at several hundred thousand dollars annually, have been effected since the force has been enlarged and improved.

Pledges End to Practices.

"If not interfered with, I am going to put an end to such practices in the District in order that honest business men shall not be harassed by dishonest competition, and consumers shall not be swindled."

Roberts asked $56,380 for personal services, as against $53,800 for 1937, and the same amount for expenditures on sample purchases and equipment, $9,150.

Other administrative agency estimates, as compared with 1937 appropriations, are as follows:

Executive offices—$51,380 for 1938, as against $47,400 for 1937.

Purchasing division—$57,440 and $57,000.

Building inspection—$122,860 and $122,860.

Plumbing inspection—$46,290, including one additional restaurant inspector, as against $43,990. Also requests $3,000 to compensate for overtime work, averaging 45 minutes daily.

Smoke regulation—$18,200, including new assistant engineer; $15,000.

Boiler inspection (new)—$8,000 for boiler inspector, assistant boiler inspector and clerk.

Public convenience stations—$15,000 as against $14,000 for maintenance; also $50,000 for erection of comfort station near Tenth and U streets northwest.

District Building.

District Building care—$94,900 for personal services unchanged; $31,320 for fuel and light as against $30,000.

Assessor's office—$227,500, including $2,500 for temporary clerk hire, as compared with $225,000.

Tax collector—$47,900, unchanged.

Corporation counsel—$101,780, including one new telephone switchboard operator, as against $99,580.

Coroner—$13,120, including one additional janitor and one stenographer, for personal services, as compared with $10,600; also $4,500 for motor vehicle service, as against $4,800.

Chief clerk, engineer department—$29,340, unchanged.

Autoist Injured In Crash Named In Two Holdups

Lawrence Tavener Reported in Serious Condition; 2 Identify Him.

Arrested early yesterday after a stolen automobile he is said to have been driving crashed into another car at Fourteenth and H streets northwest during an 80-mile-an-hour police chase, Lawrence Tavener, 29, was identified at Gallinger Hospital last night in connection with two downtown robberies, investigators reported.

Tavener was injured critically when his speeding car overturned after the crash. The car, reported stolen in nearby Maryland, was spotted by two First Precinct policemen near Third street and Massachusetts avenue northwest, shortly before 5 a. m. A 35-block chase ended in the crash.

Samuel Farrar, colored, 36, of Philadelphia, Pa., driver of the machine which was struck, escaped with minor injuries. He was released after first-aid treatment at George Washington University Hospital.

Tavener, according to police, was identified as the man who robbed Leo Marcelly, of 86 R street northwest, and Samuel Gouldman, 1115 Ninth street northwest. Gouldman, a taxi driver, was robbed of $145, he reported. Marcelly, a restaurant proprietor, said only 12 cents was taken from him and the hold-up man overlooked $200 which he had hidden.

Both hold-up victims went to the hospital and identified Tavener, police said.

Bell Girl Freed In Baltimore Larceny Case

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 28.—Judge Roland K. Adams acquitted Jean Bell, Luciano vice case figure, today on a charge of larceny from a man who was said to have brought her to Baltimore several months ago.

Judge Adams commented that it seemed to him obvious that the full truth was not being disclosed because of possible Mann act responsibility. He said he could surmise the real facts, but that upon the evidence before him he must find the young woman innocent.

Miss Bell had been held more than a week after being brought here from Washington, where she told authorities a story of having been beaten and branded by persons she said sought revenge for evidence she gave in the New York Luciano case. Washington police labelled her story a hoax.

Philip R. Davis, middle-aged Washington war veteran, accused her of taking more than $500 from him in a Baltimore hotel, where they had registered. He said he recognized her from pictures published in connection with her Washington torture story.

Miss Bell admitted meeting Davis at a Washington hotel where, he said, a bell boy had introduced her. She denied taking any money except what he had given her.

She said a $100 bill found in her possession had been part of $200 witness fees paid her in New York after her appearance in the Luciano case there.

Advertising Club Sets Outing Today

The Advertising Club of Washington will hold a summer outing today at the Annapolis Roads Club. The all-day program includes both land and water sports, followed by a dinner and entertainment at 7:30 p. m.

The biggest event of the day, perhaps, will be the golf tournament, an 18-hole handicap affair, which begins at 1 p. m. About 40 admen have entered.

Besides golf, the afternoon will be occupied with soft ball and water sports. Alvin Q. Ehrlich, general chairman of the outing, will preside at the dinner, and has arranged for trophies for the winners of the golf tournament.

Fisheries Units to Use New Type Rearing Pond

The Bureau of Fisheries has approved a new type rearing pond invented by Glen Leach, chief of the division of fish culture.

The water in the new rearing pond may be lowered almost to the bottom, forcing the fish to swim madly about to keep their heads in the water. Their rapid movement stirs up the debris which, with the aid of a stream of water from a jet near the side of the pool, can be washed away.

Police Reveal A 'Can't-Lose' Racket Here

2 Arrested on Charges of Selling Jewelry Lottery Tickets.

A brand-new type of numbers racket was uncovered here yesterday as police quickly followed a raid on an alleged numbers and bookmaking establishment in the 1700 block of Fourteenth street northwest with the arrest of two men said to be selling a you-can't-lose kind of lottery tickets.

The men, who gave their names as Jack M. Gersten, 40, and Emil F. Rochedieu, 38, both of a downtown hotel, were arrested in Wisconsin avenue, near Western avenue northwest, by Lieut. George M. Little, chief of the Vice Squad. They both were charged with operating a lottery.

The two, said to have been working in the Northwest section for some time, claimed to be representatives of a Newark, N. J., jewelry firm. They sold tickets bearing five-digit numbers for $1.

Ticket holders were told they would win a $500 prize if at any time during the week of purchase the number on the ticket corresponded to the last five digits in the daily Treasury balance, as published in a New York paper. For other combinations of numbers, prizes ranging from $5 to $250 were promised.

If a gambler bought $45 worth of tickets and didn't win anything, the operators promised, he was entitled to choose $45 worth of jewelry, which would be furnished free by the Newark firm which the operators claimed to represent. Thus the player "couldn't lose."

The raid in the 1700 block of Fourteenth street, which resulted in ten persons being taken into custody, was the ninth raid police have made in the past week in a hunt for three members of the Warring gang, wanted in connection with a racket shooting some weeks ago.

As a result of the raid, Charles Harrison, colored, 33, of the 900 block of Third street northwest, said to be one of the proprietors of the establishment, was charged with conducting a lottery. Jerry Ross, colored, 32, of the 800 block of First street northwest, said to be another proprietor, was charged with permitting gaming.

Belt Leads Raid.

Lieut. A. C. Belt, acting captain of the Third Police Precinct, yesterday led a raid on a gaming establisment in the 1700 block of Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Belt and two privates, L. W. Rivercomb and R. H. Taylor, arrested a dozen men, who were subsequently released, and seized alleged racing slips and other betting material.

Wednesday, Police Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen issued instructions to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, that precinct commanders and patrolmen should be held responsible for gaming infractions occurring on their beats.

Officials said this was the first raid made by a precinct after Hazen's order, which came after the headquarters vice squad had discovered an elaborate gambling house in the Third Precinct.

$1,000 Offer for 'Fixed' Bout Probed by D. C. Boxing Body

Frankie Blair Says Bribe Attempted

Asserts Local Manager Sought to 'Fix' Fight With Carey Wright.

Was 1-3 Betting Choice; Is Ordered Here for Investigation.

By Bill McCormick.

A sensational charge by Frankie Blair, Camden, N. J., welterweight, that he was offered $1,000 by a Washington fight manager to lose to Cary Wright, local 147-pounder, has been placed in the hands of the District Boxing Commission for investigation, the Post learned last night.

The commission will order Blair, who has agreed to sign an affidavit regarding the alleged attempt to "fix" the bout, to appear for questioning. The Camden fighter's expenses will be paid for the trip to Washington. Should he fail to appear for the investigation, he probably will be suspended by the local commisison, which would mean his suspension in the 38 States allied with the National Boxing Association.

Won Split Decision.

Blair won a split decision from Wright at Griffith Stadium last summer in the bout he charges the local manager attempted to pay him to lose.

The busy little Camden fighter, who has defeated District Welterweight Champion Phil Furr, among others, charges that the $1,000 offer was made him in a Washington restaurant, with the explanation that he was a 1-to-3 favorite over Wright.

Blair has named another local manager, who he does not connect with the alleged attempt to predetermine the result of the fight, as being present and in a position to testify regarding the validity of his charges.

Blair's charge, which may result in a sweeping investigation by the Boxing Commission, are the first of the kind to be placed before the local governing board of swat since the legalization of boxing here in April, 1934.

Will Study Evidence.

In a few of the many bouts held here since that time the purses of both contestants have been held up on a "no contest" charge, but never has it been said that gamblers or others interested in the outcome of bouts have attempted to fix fights.

The commission will study the evidence presented more minutely next Monday, after which a definite date for Blair's appearance will be set and he will be ordered to report.

Blair, a youthful Italian, is the younger brother of Mickey Blair, himself once a good fighter who now manages and trains Frankie.

Kingfish Pilot Fined $50 by D. C. Body

Steinman, Manager of Levinsky, Disciplined for His Criticism.

Harold Steinman, manager of King Levinsky, was fined $50—an amount he agreed was fair—for stirring up the tempest in the teapot occasioned when his well intentioned efforts to provoke interest in the King's forthcoming fight with Marty Gallagher were taken too seriously in some quarters.

The fine was levied by the District Boxing Commission after Steinman had told that august body that he meant to cast no aspersions on local officials when he directed an open letter to all local papers claiming that Gallagher would be favored in the officiating when he meets Levinsky at Griffith Stadium next Tuesday night.

"I did not intend to convey the impression that I thought the Boxing Commission or any referee, judge or other employe of the commission was intentionally unfair or dishonest," said Steinmn, in part.

"My primary purpose in writing the letter (of August 24) was to avoid the possibility of the referee or judges being in any way swayed by the feeling of the crowd at the fight, which I feel contributed to the loss of the decision last year."

Fouling Caused Decision.

Gallagher was awarded the decision over Levinsky in a bout last November, which was close, but officially bestowed on Marty because the herring peddler was guilty of many fouls.

The $50 fine will be donated by the commission to the fund for disabled boxers. Steinman was so taken with the idea of the fund to aid down-and-out pugs that he suggested a tax of 1 per cent be levied on each fighter's purse in the future. He readily agreed to have that amount taken from Levinsky's purse for the Gallagher fight and Commissioner Parkinson and Owen, the only members present, voted to adopt the idea in the future.

To avoid the possibility of any official being influenced by the crowd, orders were issued that the judges not only be isolated at the ringside, but that inspectors be stationed near them to see that they are not allowed to carry on any conversation with anyone during the progress of a bout.

Orders also were issued that no boxing commission official was to cheer, root, or otherwise display any favoritism during the progress of a contest.

Owens Is Honored In Columbus Fete

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 28 (AP).—In the front yard of Ohio's Capitol, the State late today honored Jesse Owens, Negro Olympic hero.

State offices closed for two hours during the afternoon to permit employes to be at the union station when Owen's train arrived. There the four-time Olympic winner was hoisted into an open automobile and headed a parade to the State House. Gov. Martin L. Davey, Mayor B. Gessaman, Vice President Lou Morrell of Ohio State University, and Arthur L. Evans, of the Chamber of Commerce, greeted the university's track champion.

Owen's wife accepted a gift of a chest of silverware from the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and the track star told the crowd:

"I had a grand time, but the competition was really stiff, especially that Lutz Long, the German, in the broad jump. I'd jump 25 feet and 8 inches, then Hitler would give Long a look and he'd jump 25 feet and 8 inches. I'd jump 25 feet 10 inches and Hitler would give Long another look. Then he'd equal my jump again. The last time I was luckier."

Owens said he intended to leave for New York tomorrow night for a reception there, but he planned to return to Ohio State for his degree in physical education.

Giants' 15th Won in 14th By Terry

Ailing Pilot's Pinch Hit Scores Two Runs as Pirates Bow, 7-2.

Win Keeps 3-Game Edge Over Cubs; Fitzsimmons Beats Hoyt in Duel.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 28.—The aging and ailing Bill Terry creaked up to the plate in the fourteenth inning today and rapped out a pinch-single with the bases loaded to start off a rally that stretched the New York Giants' winning streak to 15 straight games.

His hit drove in the first two runs in a six-run splurge which gave the Giants a 7 to 2 victory over the Pirates, breaking up a pitching thriller between a pair of veterans, Freddy Fitzsimmons and Waite Hoyt.

The win enabled the Giants to hold their three-game National League lead over the Chicago Cubs.

For 13 innings, Fitz and Hoyt pitched on a par, with the score at 1-all through the Pirates' run in the third and the Giants' tying tally in the fifth.

Opening the fourteenth, Mel Ott walked, Jim Ripple singled and Sam Leslie beat out a bunt to load the bases. That was the cue for Terry's entrance with his two-run single. After he finished, Gus Mancuso dropped a single over second base to bring in another run, Dick Bartell walked, and Joe Moore banged out a three-run double.

The Pirates made a game effort to do something about it in their half of the fourteenth, but Gabbo Gabler, called in to relieve the tiring Fitzsimmons, stopped them with one run.

The victory was Fitzsimmons' seventh of the season. He held the Bucs to half a dozen hits for the 13 frames he worked.

Towns Equals World Hurdle Record

Georgian Who Day Before Ran Event in 13.7 Ties Own Mark.

By the Associated Press.

Oslo, Aug. 28.—Forrest Towns, University of Georgia hurdler who was clocked in the phenomenal time of 13.7 for the 110-meter hurdles yesterday, won his specialty again today in an international track and field meet.

The Southerner stepped over the sticks in 14.1 seconds to equal the world record he established in winning the Olympic title. O'Conner, of Canada, was second in 14.7.

Foy Draper, southern California sprinter, won the 100-meter dash in 10.6, while Glen Dawson, of Tulsa, was timed in 3:57.1 in finishing second in the 1,500-meter run.

Archie Williams, 400-meter Olympic champion from California, won his event in 47.1 seconds, eight-tenths of a second faster than Fritz, of Canada, who was runner-up.

Ken Carpenter and Gordon (Slinger) Dunn, one, two in the Olympics, finished in the same order in the discus throw. Carpenter tossed the plate 163 feet 7½ inches, while Dunn got off a throw of 162 feet.

Dave Albritton, of Ohio State, repeated his yesterday's victory in the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 6¾ inches.

Granville, Discovery In Battle at Saratoga

By the Associated Press.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 28. Discovery, 5-year-old king of the handicap division, and his youthful rival, the 3-year-old Granville, battle more for glory than riches tomorrow when they hook up in a duel in the fifty-seventh running of the $5,000 Saratoga Cup.

The $25,000 Hopeful, bringing together 11 of the leading 2-year-olds, also is on the Spa's program. It's the duel between Discovery, ace of Alfred G. Vanderbilt's stable, and Granville, flying the silks of William Woodward's Belair Stud, however, that is expected to draw the largest crowd through the gates since Gallant Fox and Whichone were whipped in the Travers six years ago by Jim Dandy, the 100 to 1 shot.

Johnny Bejshak, 27-year-old veteran from Baltimore, will ride Discovery while Jimmy Stout, 6 years younger and from Lakewood, N. J., will hnadle Granville's reins.

Discovery probably will be the slight favorite, but there is little to choose between the son of Display nad Granville, winner of his last four starts and leading money winner of his division. Neither has ever been the mile and three-quarters, but both are bred for distance. Granville is an offspring of Gallant Fox, the 1930 winner.

Billionaire is expected to rule a slight favorite with little to choose between the two entries for runner-up honors in the betting ring. Maedic has been the most consistent, but Billionaire displayed brilliant form in his lone outing this month.

The remainder of the field includes Vanderbilt's Tedious, C. V. Whitney's Flying Cross, Julia M. Loft's entry of Wam and Mosawtre, Warren Wright's Galsun and Mrs. Ethel V. Mar's Dogway.

Discovery will go to the post with 126 pounds in the saddle and Granville with 10 pounds less.

Marion Miley, Patty Berg Defeated

By the Associated Press.

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 28.—In two of the hardest fought matches of the current Women's Western Closed Golf Tournament Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, and Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis, today won their way to the final of the thirty-sixth annual championship. Miss Traung firing a bombshell with her elimination of the defending champion, Marion Miley.

Miss Traung, who had been hard-pressed by three 18-year-old youngsters in the first three rounds, found Miss Miley in a poor putting streak, took a 1-hole lead on her in the first nine and held grimly to that advantage.

Miss Barrett, continuing the fine play which has seen her gain three easy victories on her way to the semi-finals, had a fight on her hands with 17-year-old red-headed Patty Berg as her opponent, but she had more strokes than Patty could muster, however and won 2 up, putting the clincher on the match with a birdie 4 on the 475-yard nome hole.

Miss Traung, who has been improving with every match, had a medal of 82 against the 80 Miss Barrett fired, but she seldom missed the openings Marion gave her with poor putting and showed herself the same fine competitor who went to the national finals in 1934 and carried Virginia Van Wie 34 holes before bowing.

Miss Miley started out like a house on fire with three one-putt greens, but there the streak ran out and she had only one other one-putt green in the last 15 holes, a 4-footer on the fourteenth, where she squared the match for the second time. She was right back at her old habits on the next two, which she lost, and only Miss Traung's misfortune in catching the lake on the seventeenth kept the match alive for the final hole which was halved.

Patty held Miss Barrett even for the first six holes, where they were both one over par, but Bea began to get the range of her approach shots at the seventh, where she put one dead to the pin for a birdie four, won the next two holes to make the turn three up with an even-par medal of 39 and Patty never could catch her. Miss Berg won the twelfth and thirteenth, Miss Barrett missing a two-footer for a halve on the latter hole, but Patty could get no better than halves on the next three and bowed to Miss Barrett's superlative play on the final hole.

Sunday Twin Bill Scheduled by Nats

Washington baseball fans will be offered a double-header at Griffith Stadium tomorrow, instead of a single game, when the Nats open a three-game series with the Browns.

The game originally scheduled for Monday has been moved up to Sunday to create the double bill and the teams will thus have an off day before resuming their series.

In an effort to square the two-game series with the White Sox today, Manager Bucky Harris will send his leading pitcher, Jimmy DeShong, to the mound. He will be opposed by Merritt Cain.

Yanks Trample Tigers Twice, 14-5, 19-4

Gehrig Hits 41st and 42d Home Runs as 5 Detroit Hurlers Go Down.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 28.—The Yankees trampled the Detroit Tigers with a tremendous display of hitting power in both ends of a double-header today, taking the opener 14 to 5 and the abbreviated night-cap 19 to 4.

Murderers' row went to town against five Detroit pitchers with such results as Lou Gehrig belting his forty-first and forty-second homers in the opener; Red Rolfe batting in eight runs in both games; Joe DiMaggio hammering his twenty-fourth round-tripper in the nightcap, and Johnny Murphy, who pitched the second game, driving in five runs with as many hits.

Ruffing Wins His 18th.

The Yanks banged out 14 hits in the first game, with Red Ruffing turning in his eighteenth pitching victory. In the nightcap, they collected 17 safe blows before darkness forced a halt in the middle of the seventh inning.

The twin win shot them 13½ games in front of the pack, since

The Latest Fall Styles In Football Proselyting

East Lansing, Aug. 28 (AP).—The letter of a Brooklyn, N. Y., youth to Charley Bachman, head football coach at Michigan State College, indicated today that while the writer may be neither good as a footballer or student, he knows how to put across an idea.

The letter, the name of the writer withheld by Bachman:

"Dear Mr. Charles Bachman:
"I want to play football.
"I want to go to school.
"If you want me call at once.
"If you don't want me go chase yourself."

'P. S.—And make is snappy."

Nat Uprising Fails; Chisox Win, 6-5

Badly Worked Squeeze Play Ends Matters; Sox Are Outhit.

Appleton Allows 8 Hits, Is Victim of Errors Letting In Scores.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Five thousand ladies' day guests and some paying customers who had been kidded into staying for the final out at Griffith Stadium yesterday finally left the scene sadly disillusioned by the Nats.

There was a great disposition to move toward the exits as Washington entered the eighth inning against the White Sox, trailing 6 to 2, but the Nats began to act up, picked up two runs, and then, with two out in the ninth, they gave the dispersing crowd another come-on.

Buddy Lewis, Joe Kuhel and Johnny Stone rapped out consecutive singles that drove across one run, drove Johnny Whitehead out of the box, and put the tying run on third. With Clint Brown relieving Whitehead and Carl Reynolds batting, the Nats went strategic. Reynolds was ordered to squeeze the tying run home with a bunt.

The idea was not bad, perhaps, but the execution was miserable. Reynolds bunted the ball directly at Pitcher Brown, was thrown out at first by 20 feet, and the Nats lost the ball game, 6 to 5.

Nats Outhit Sox.

Back there in the eighth inning the Nats didn't distinguish themselves either—at least Ossie Bluege, the fielding hero of the game, didn't. After four straight singles off Whitehead by Reynolds, Travis, Bolton and Bluege had driven across 2 runs, reduced the Sox's lead to 6 to 4, and put the tying run on base with two out, Bluege succeeded in getting himself picked off first base by Luke Sewell's snap throw to Bonura.

It was quite a feat for the Nats to lose that ball game. They outhit the Sox, 11 to 8, but they were habitually making their hits with two out, when they counted least. Ten of their 11 safeties were made under those conditions.

Pete Appleton was no shining success out there on the mound for the Nats, but he has a fine case of non-support to offer as an alibi. A fumble by Joe Kuhel figured mightily in a three-run rally by the Sox in the third inning, and some ragged handling of the ball in a run-down permitted the Sox to score another precious run from first base on a single in the seventh.

Sox Take Lead.

While Whitehead was holding the Nats to four hits in the first seven innings, the Sox were busily taking their 6-2 lead. Appleton gave 'em their first run, in the second, when he walked Appling, hit Hayes, and pitched a looping single to Dykes, escaping further damage when Bluege turned Whitehead's grounder into a nifty double play.

The Nats bounced right back to go in front, 2-1, in the same inning when Stone singled, Travis doubled and Bolton singled, but then Whitehead dealt 'em a string of six zeros.

Appleton was throwing his right-field ball in the third when the Sox went ahead, 4-2. With one out, Kreevich singled to right, and Rosenthal was safe on Kuhel's muff. Bonura singled to right, Appling singled to right, and the third run scored when Lewis threw too late to the plate after scooping up Hayes' grounder.

The Sox made 6-2 in the seventh when Radcliff, Kreevich, Rosenthal and Appling rapped out singles and rapped Appleton out of the box.

As I was saying, the Nats had the tying runs on base in both the eighth and ninth, but you know the sad details of those two innings.

Gastanaga 'Faked,' Charge in Denver

Denver, Aug. 28 (AP).—Isidoro Gastanaga, Spanish heavyweight, was suspended today for six months by the Colorado Boxing Commission, which held that his second round knockout last night by Hank Hankinson, Los Angeles, "was a fake."

The commission said the fight "was not a contest," and ordered Gastanaga's share—$153—of the purse forfeited.

Hankinson and his manager, Suey Welch, were cleared of "any suspicion of guilt."

Railings at AAU Drown Olympic 'Welcome'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 28.—America's Olympic argosy streamed into its home port tonight to receive an almost nonexistent welcome and to continue its rather noisy argument as to whether or not the trip had been properly conducted.

The 239 athletes, coaches and officials who arrived on the S. S. President Roosevelt, which bore the main body of returning Olympians, outnumbered the stay-at-homes who were on hand to receive them.

A scant 150 friends and relatives were on the pier when the ship arrived, while only about 20 made the trip down the bay on the city's welcoming boat, the Riverside.

But while the greeting was a quiet one, the Olympians themselves made up for the lack of it by the loudness of their "squawks" and the firmness of officials' replies to the attacks. Backing up the first blast, let loose a few days ago when Alfred Masters, of Stanford, assistant track and field manager, sharply criticized the official conduct of the Olympic trip, Gene Venzke, the Pennsylvania "picture runner," who came in ninth in the Olympic 1,500 run, spoke of the "high-hat attitude" of the ranking American officials.

"The party was poorly handled," Venzke commented. "The penny-pinching attitude of the officials and their remaining aloof from the athletes spoiled what otherwise would have been a w

41 Swimmers to Compete in 3-Mile President's Cup Race Today

Field Is Best In History Of Event

Race to Start at 3 P. M.; Weeks Will Receive Plaque as Tribute.

Forty-one natators, the largest and reputedly best field of long-distance swimmers ever assembled in Washington at one time, will paddle around a triangular course in the Potomac River this afternoon in the annual 3-mile President's Cup race, premier event of the city's water sports calendar. The race is considered part of the President's Cup Reatta program.

The start will be from the Washington Canoe Club's float just above Key Bridge, and the field, excepting those hardy souls who may try swimming under water, will be in plain and comfortable view of the spectators at all times—when the spectators are looking. The starting gun will send the contestants on their way promptly at 3 o'clock.

While the boys are splashing around and enjoying themselves, A. Earle Weeks, the town's No. 1 aquatic fan and official, who has done more than any 12 others to promote water sports here, will be uncomfortably listening to a lot of speech-making in his honor. Earle also will receive a plaque in tribute to his achievements and untiring efforts from his numerous admirers.

Tresnak Defending Title.

This year's race has attracted one of the most cosmopolitan fields ever entered. They have come from the coal fields of Scranton and the farms of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., from the rubber factories of Akron, Ohio, from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other points east, and for the first time since the race was inaugurated, the out-of-towners will outnumber the local entries.

Harry Tresnak, winner of the event last year, will defend his crown although not representing Lenox Hill Club. He is one of 10 unattached natators entered. Tresnak is in excellent condition and has attracted the eye of the New York Athletic Club, which has offered him membership when his unattached period expires, but it will take a powerful lot of swimming to win today.

Out-of-Town Stars.

Leo Macionis, of the Big Brothers Club, Philadelphia, whose brother was a member of the Olympic team; Murray Goldstein, crippled boy, representing the Curley Club, of Boston; Willard Schuffbauer, national long distance champion; Elmer Woodling, national 5-mile champion, who won the Spalding 3-mile swim last week at Philadelphia, and Myron Peters, national junior long-distance champion, are but a few of the top-notch swimmers Tresnak must whip to retain his laurels.

Bernie McCoy, 40-year-old District man who finished last in the 1935 race, will be in there again today although he hopes to do a little, better this time. Charles Schwartz has donated a trophy which will be presented the first Washington man to finish.

possible after disembarking. Others planned to remain aboard the President Roosevelt until tomorrow. It was not determined how many would accept the week's hospitality offered by the city and remain here until the rest of the Olympians arrive on the Manhattan next Thursday.

A big civic welcome, including a parade up Broadway with ticker tape and all the trimings and a reception at the Randalls Island Stadium when medals will be presented to all the Olympians, is planned for next week. A large number of the point winners in track and field are coming on the Manhattan.

A total of 239 were in the party which returned aboard the President Roosevelt today, of whom 198 were athletes.

Trapshooting's Classic Won by Novice, 59

Hoosier Mechanic Takes Vandalia Handicap in Shoot-Off.

By the Associated Press.

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 28.—B. F. Cheek, 59-year-old garage owner and auto mechanic, from Clinton, Ind., made good a boast today and won the Grand American Handicap, highest prize in the trapshooting world, in his first attempt in the annual classic.

The gray-haired sharpshooter defeated 25-year-old Herbert Bush, of Eaton, Ill., another garage owner and auto mechanic, in a 100-target shoot-off. E. L. Buchwalter, Springfield, Ohio, printer, went out of the shoot-off on the first 25 after the trio had tied with 98 of 100.

Both Buchwalter, a southpaw shooter, and Bush wore the usual shooting jackets and other paraphernalia, but the winner was dressed in ordinary trousers and crumpled shirt.

Longest Shoot-Off.

They tied up in the shoot-off before several thousand galleryites. Buchwalter missed his twenty-fifth target in the shoot-off, and went out.

Both the others went "straight" through the first shoot-off even. Bush and Cheek each broke 24 of the second event and 22 of the third. Then the Hoosier cracked 23 of the last 25, while his youthful foe got but 22.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

the second-place Cleveland Indians were idle.

By clubbing out two homers in the first game, both into his favorite spot in the right field bleachers, Gehrig remained even with Babe Ruth's record year of 1927, when the Babe collected 60 four-baggers.

In the nightcap, the homicide squad of sluggers had their biggest inning of the year, when they assaulted Vic Sorrell and Roxy Lawson for 11 runs in the second frame.

The double defeat dropped the Tigers into fourth place in the American League, as the White Sox defeated Washington to take over third.

Dodgers Beat Reds, 8-1, In First; Drop 2d, 6 to 4

Cincinnati, Aug. 28 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers opened their final series of the season at Cincinnati today by splitting a double-header with the Reds, winning the opener, 8 to 1, and dropping the nightcap, 6 to 4.

Fred Frankhouse's six-hit pitching and Babe Phelps' big bat enabled the Brooklyns to take the first game. Phelps hit a homer with two mates on base, a double and a single. Frankhouse hurled his ninth win of the season.

In the nightcap the Reds shoved three runs across in the seventh inning to sew up the game after the Dodgers had tied it up with a three-run splurge in their half of the same frame.

Wacoche Wins Narragansett Feature by Length

Daily Double Returns but $30.80

Col. Greene 2d in Front of Mountainy Man; Victor Pays $7.20.

By the Associated Press.

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 28.—The Corsicana Stable's Wacoche, 5-year-old High Cloud gelding who was made the favorite, won the Tercentenary Claiming Stakes, a mile and 70 yards for 3-year-olds and upward, by a length from Weston Adams' Col. Greene here today.

Three lengths back of Col. Greene who was coupled in the betting with Mrs. E. I. Wade's Up and Up, came the Mulvihill Brother's Mountainy Man.

A. C. Bostwick's Upside Down sped through on the rail to take command around the first turn and Wacoche cleared away from the field to run back of the pace setter down the back stretch.

Approaching the far turn, the field bunched up on the two horses out front and Mrs. C. Crane's Ladfield attempted to gain ground but found the pace too fast as Wacoche sailed by Upside Down.

Col. Greene saved ground on the rail and came in the home stretch to take the place money as Mountainy Man, who was started on the outside of the gate, also closed fast.

The winner, favorite of the crowd, paid $7.20, $3.90 and $3.10. Col. Greene paid $3.70 and $2.90, and Mountainy Man returned $4.90.

The daily double today paid but $30.80 with the favored Scotch Gold winning the second race after the third choice, Onward took the first. There were 755 tickets sold on this combination.

ONWARD, much the best, took command while under slight restraint in the opening quarter-mile, increased his lead steadily and drew out fast through the last five-sixteenths. SEA GULL was restrained early and closed strong stoutly on the inside through the stretch. FIRST SMILE was prominently placed all the way and had no excuses. STEPASIDE improved his position steadily and closed with good energy in the stretch run. BLANDISHMENT moved up on the inside down the back stretch, though never able to reach the leaders. SPINNING MEMORY had early speed, tiring after going three furlongs. PLAYFUL PRINCE had brief early speed. CAPITOL HILL tired.

SCOTCH GOLD went to the front in the opening strides, met determined opposition from OUR CREST in the first half-mile, shook off the latter and staving off the bid of CHARACTER, was going clear at the end. CHARACTER, prominently placed all the way, bled on gamely. OUR CREST, in closest chase of the pace early, while unable to reach the leader, was hard ridden and just lasted to save third from DIE HARD. The latter was unable to keep up early, though closing gamely in the final drive. GRANNY'S TRADE, well placed, held on well to the end. RETIRED, well placed for the first half-mile, was unable to make up any ground when called upon. DARK WAR was unable to keep up. TORNADIC was far back throughout.

Extradition Fight Won by 'Cropper

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 28 (AP).—Gov. Henry Horner tonight declined to authorize extradition to Arkansas of Sam Bennett, colored share cropper, wanted there on charges of attempted assault on his employer.

Bennett, after a flight through swamp lands, was arrested in Chicago and recently was freed on bond pending disposition of his case. A hearing was held here several months ago on requisition to return him and the Governor last Tuesday talked with the fugitive in Chicago.

Recalling the recent organization of sharecroppers in the South, Horner said the group "unquestionably" has been met by "aggressive attempts on the part of the plantation owners" and that there were "reliable reports of floggings and other violence."

"It is possible that if Bennett were returned he would be caught in the jaws of this controversy and suffer ill-treatment," the Governor said.

Roberts, jailed at Gold Beach, remembered nothing of the shooting. State police said he told them, but recalled a nightmare in which he dreamed of being held up.
